Roosevelt Candidacy Unchallenged In Ohio

Wheeler Decides Not to File There; Garner Ponders Move in State

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A Roosevelt-pledged candidate yesterday stood unchallenged on Ohio's Presidential primary ballot as other Democratic contestants either hesitated or decided against bearding the Buckeye State organization.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, who would have made Ohio his only primary bid for the Presidency had Mr. Roosevelt not entered through a substitute, definitely determined not to file there.

Vice President Garner conferred at length with former Gov. George White, his close friend, but failed to announce any decision. White, who has agreed to be a delegate on the State's "favorite son" slate, said he had not advised Garner either way.

Garner's Ohio Plans

The Vice President will confer with other friendly Ohio Democratic leaders before making a move, but indications were he would not enter a full slate of delegates against the pro-Roosevelt list. A limited slate of Garner delegates in Ohio districts believed favorable to the Vice President was reported still under discussion. Garner managers suggested no decision would be reached until March.

As supporters of both Federal Security Administrator McNutt and Postmaster General Farley previously had indicated their men would not file in Ohio, on Garner's decision alone hinged a primary third term test in this Mid-west proving ground.

Nominally heading the State organization's Presidential preference ticket was Charles Sawyer, National Committeeman, and substitute "favorite son" who agreed to run after Senator "Honest Vic" Donahey refused to be a third term "stalking horse." While the President has not filed in Ohio, the State organization is committed by resolution to deliver delegates to Mr. Roosevelt if he runs.

Donahey yesterday rejected as well a bid to be a delegate-at-large on the Sawyer slate, saying if he goes to the convention at all it will be as a spectator.

Already in Wisconsin—Illinois

Garner already has entered in Wisconsin and Illinois against pro-Roosevelt organizations, but was proceeding with such caution in Ohio that betting odds were against a contest. His managers drew comfort, meanwhile, from Sam Houston Jones' triumph over Long forces in Louisiana's gubernatorial run-off primaries. The Jones' people were believed favorable to Garner who is seeking a pledged delegation from Louisiana.

Other developments:

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, added his voice to growing Senate Democratic demands that the President speak out on the third-term issue. Van Nuys, a McNutt supporter, said it might be "smart politics" to remain silent, but it is unfair to other candidates and the public at large.

In Illinois, where the strong Kelly-Nash-Horner organizations were booming a third term for

Jones Pledges Rehabilitation After Routing Long Machine

Mr. and Mrs. Jones Wear the Smile of Victory

'Greatest Job Any Louisiana Public Official Has Faced Since Reconstruction Days' Is Ahead of Him, Says Jubilant Winner

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Feb. 21.—Louisiana's next Governor, 42-year-old Sam H. Jones, turned today from his smashing ballot victory over the old Huey P. Long dictatorship to plan the "rehabilitation of Louisiana."

Jubilant at his triumph by more than 20,000 votes over Gov. Earl K. Long for the four-year term beginning May 14, Jones nevertheless soberly called his "the greatest job any Louisiana public official has faced since reconstruction days."

In an interview he said "our simple objective is to restore constitutional, democratic, decent government.

"The second thing is to put Louisiana on a sound financial basis. And the third is we must never let this thing happen again in Louisiana—this set of conditions that for years has made every honest Louisianian bow his head in shame."

The rout of the machine was complete. Long's slate of secondary officers went down with him by

Capital Joins U. S. in Tribute To Washington

Many Ceremonies To Center at Tomb, Monument Today

The marble shaft of the Washington Monument and a red brick tomb at Mount Vernon dominate the Capital and Nation today.

Washington's tribute to the first President, on the 208th anniversary of his birth, begins at 8 a. m. when guards raise State and District flags on 49 staffs circling the Monument. An hour later a White House military aide will place a wreath from President Roosevelt at the Monument base.

Throughout the day patriotic societies will make their annual pilgrimage to George Washington's estate above the Potomac.

In Alexandria, where Gen. Washington maintained military headquarters through much of the Revolution, more than 3,000 men will march in honor of the anniversary. Soldiers, sailors, marines, National Guardsmen, R. O. T. C. cadets, CCC boys and veteran groups are taking

Snow to Follow Today's Fair Skies

Aided by cloudless skies, Washington stargazers last night between 5:45 and 6 p. m. were rewarded with the unusual sight of five planets consorting. Venus, Jupiter, Mars, Saturn and Mercury were visible to the naked eye for 15 minutes.

The city will enjoy one more fair day, the weather man predicted, before more snow. Tomorrow, he said, will be cloudy with light snow and little change in temperature, which ranged between 32 and 41 degrees yesterday.

Man, 84, Sought As Wife-Killer, Believed Dead

Police Have Letter Confessing Slaying; Threatens Suicide

Prince Georges County police yesterday swore to a warrant charging Joseph A. DePerini, 84, with the murder of his wife, but they did not expect to find him alive.

Police were in possession of a letter from the missing man, in which he said he killed his wife and was going to take his own life, it was reliably learned. The letter, scrawled in pencil, and postmarked from Washington Tuesday night, was received by Frank Dawson, of Riverdale, DePerini's son-in-law.

The warrant accusing DePerini, retired Capital Transit Co. motorman, of slashing his wife, Alice, to death with a butcher knift in their apartment at 511 Maryland avenue, Riverdale, Tuesday afternoon, was issued by Justice of the Peace Henry O'Neill.

According to police, DePerini was last seen in Anacostia about 7:30 Tuesday night, by William Brosnan, machinist, of the 1400 block of S street southeast. He told police the man, apparently intoxicated, mumbled:

"I just killed my wife."

A check-up of all DePerini's relatives in and around Washington failed to disclose any definite clews as to his whereabouts.

DePerini and his wife had been having trouble for some time, police said.

Mr. and Mrs. DePerini were married in 1936. It was her third marriage and his fourth. They had been living in Riverdale about two months.

Dr. James I. Boyd, county coroner, who examined Mrs. De Perini's body at Gasch's undertaking parlors, Hyattsville, said she had been stabbed three times in the throat, and once in the back, the left arm and the forehead.

Van Duzer Christens 28 Lights To Dazzle Union Station Plaza

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

While one branch of Washington's traffic-control system moved yesterday to cure a number of major motoring ills, another division succeeded in making the patient even sicker by inaugurating an elaborate array of jam-breeding signal lights at Union Station Plaza.

Hardly had Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, announced a "crack down" enforcement drive against hornblowers and jaywalkers when Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer appeared at Union Station to christen his new scheme of regulating plaza traffic—a complex system of eight vehicle lights and 20 pedestrian lights.

Chaos was a mild word for the rush-hour scene at Union Station—horn-blowing motorists, jaywalking pedestrians, confusion, delay and annoyance.

Bumpers were banged and fenders torn as homeward-bound motorists tried to figure out where they should go and what they should do to get there.

"This," bellowed one driver from the open window of his stalled car, "is one colossal mess!"

"I've never seen anything like it in five years of driving a taxi," said a cabbie, addressing his remarks to a policeman.

Bayonets Used to Halt Clipper Mail

Censors in Bermuda Invoked Marines When Plane Captain Resisted Search

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 21.—The British began censorship of United States air mails at Bermuda on January 18 by seizing 2,600 pounds of letters from a Pan-American Airways clipper at bayonet point, it was learned tonight.

Capt. Charles A. Lorber, of Baltimore, in command of the flying boat plying between the United States and Lisbon via Bermuda, not only ordered British censorship officials off his craft but also refused to surrender the mail until the British made a show of armed force.

The incident is only part of the story of censorship in the British colony, which has been cloaked in official silence for more than a month.

Colony Censors News

Pan American Airways, with head offices here, declined comment when informed that a witness to the incident had agreed to tell the story for publication.

(Implied confirmation of the incident came, however, in a London dispatch quoting a source close to the ministry of economic warfare as saying "you can be certain it won't happen again.)

Unsuccessful efforts have been made to obtain details of the censorship setup at Bermuda, together with the story of the original seizure. News itself is subject to censorship in the British colony because the government controls all commercial communications.

On January 18 Capt. Lorber landed adjacent to Darrells Island, Pan American Airways Bermuda base, and pulled up to the dock, where his passengers disembarked.

Captain Stands Ground

A staff of British censors came aboard.

"Capt. Lorber," said their spokesman, "We are going to remove your mail."

Lorber protested, "you can't do that. This is a United States vessel."

"Yes, we can," was the rejoinder. "You are in Bermuda waters."

Lorber, a veteran of the company's transpacific run, stood his ground.

"The only person I will allow on this aircraft," he said, "is the port doctor, according to custom. I'll do everything in my power to prevent the removal of that mail."

Thereupon he ordered the censorship staff ashore.

Marines Come From Shore

As his visitors walked off the craft their spokesman blew a whistle. A launch, containing a group of British marines, put out from shore. As they came alongside, Lorber saw each man carried a rifle with fixed bayonet.

Lorber mounted the stairway leading to the flight deck.

The marines clambered up on the plane's hydro-stabilizer, entered the doorway above it and followed

Germany Threatens Invasion If Stockholm Aids Finns; Reds Drop Bombs on Sweden

Sharp Protest Sent to Moscow; 2 Hurt, None Dead; Town Set Afire

By Sten Hedman.
International News Service Staff Writer

Stockholm, Feb. 21.—A fiery rain of 134 bombs dropped by seven Russian warplanes on the Swedish frontier village of Pajala was followed swiftly tonight by a sharp Swedish government protest to Russia charging the Soviet fliers violated neutral territory.

Accusations that the Russian air attack was deliberate were made by Georg Taube, sheriff of Pajala, in a statement telephoned to Stockholm. He said the Russians could not have mistaken the fact that the town was Swedish and not Finnish.

Struck by incendiary bombs, sevseral houses in Pajala were set afire and blazed for hours. Other buildings were struck by explosive bombs and damaged. Huge craters were blown out of the town's streets and market square.

Warning Phoned Town

Only a telephoned warning from another frontier village enabled residents of Pajala to take refuge from flying steel and fire. No serious casualties were reported.

The Russian bombing, although regarded in some Swedish circles as accidental, plunged the nation anew into darkening fear that Sweden may be brought into Europe's two wars.

Heightening this possibility, the Swedish government today rejected a German demand that Sweden cease all shipping commerce with Britain and France or face gradual annihilation of the Swedish merchant marine.

Protests U-Boat Attacks

Protesting bitterly against German U-boat and mine attacks on Swedish shipping, the foreign minister told Parliament Sweden was prepared to halt her import iron ore trade and other commerce with the Reich if Germany insisted on sinking Swedish merchant vessels headed for Allied or neutral European ports.

Guenther announced that the "brutality of the sea war" would be the main subject of a conference of foreign ministers of Sweden, Norway and Denmark in Copenhagen on Saturday.

Surveying the drastic effects of the war on the high seas, the Swedish government official said his country so far has lost 228 seamen and 34 ships.

Two of these ships were sunk by the Russians in the Baltic, he said, and it has been established that seven more were torpedoed by German U-boats.

Only five of the ships sunk were en route to warring nations.

"Sweden rejects Germany's orders to stop shipping to Britain and

Russians Hurl 30,000 at Finns In Drive on Eastern Flank

New Attack on Lake End of Karelia Repulsed, Helsinki Says, as Blizzard Halts Soviet Aerial Thrusts

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Feb. 21.—The Russian army, after pushing the Finns back at the western end of the Mannerheim Line, today was reported battering with great force at Finland's fortifications at Taipale, on the eastern extremity of the isthmus defenses.

The Russians threw two divisions, "strongly supported by artillery and aircraft, "into this fighting, the Finnish high command said, but were repulsed and "lost heavily." (This force presumably totaled between 30,000 and 35,000 men.)

"Fighting raged fiercely until late last night," said today's Finnish communique.

In attempting to turn the Finnish left flank, the Russians shifted their main offensive, which had been concentrated around Summa and Lake Muola in the west and which had forced the Finns to withdraw to new positions.

Fighting continued in the western isthmus region as well, however, although the Finns denied Russian claims to capture of the anchor fort of Koivisto.

The twin offensives meant that the Russians were trying to break through nearly the whole width of the isthmus, and demonstrated that the isthmus fighting still was the most critical of the entire war.

The Finns are holding the positions to which they withdrew under Russian pressure; Russian losses are said to be extremely heavy and Finnish casualties light, but there still are hundreds of thousands of Russians along the front to keep up

Stockholm, Feb. 21.—Germany has formally warned Sweden to keep her troops out of Finland. She has threatened the Scandinavian kingdom with a Nazi invasion if she disobeys.

This was learned here today on the most reliable authority, and unquestionably accounts for King Gustav's declaration Monday when he told his aroused subjects that the Swedish government could give no direct help to Finland.

The official German warning, topping advice from the Nazi press to the Scandinavian countries to observe a hands-off policy in the Russo-Finnish war, was received in Stockholm just before King Gustav issued his statement.

Press Warning Insufficient

With Russia hammering at the Mannerheim Line, and with thousands of Swedish "activists" clamoring for intervention to help Finland, Adolf Hitler apparently decided that the time had come when Berlin press warnings were not enough.

King Gustav told his countrymen that if Sweden became involved in the war "it most likely would be absolutely impossible to give Finland the not inconsiderable assistance which Finland now gets from us. . . ."

In other words, if Sweden had to use her army and her wealth to meet a Nazi onrush, it then would be impossible to continue sending volunteers, armament and money to Finland. Finland would be worse off.

Nazis Attacked Sandler

On the surface the Nazi government has paid little attention to the Russo-Finnish war. At the outset of the war the controlled Berlin press aimed such a savage attack at Richard J. Sandler, the Swedish foreign minister, that he was dropped from the government. He was accused of being pro-British and of having provoked the Russo-Finnish conflict.

Thereafter nothing was carried in the Nazi newspapers about the war in Finland until last week, when Adolf Hitler's paper, Voelkischer Beobachter, said that Finland was facing annihilation because of "England's political chess game."

Doesn't Affect Volunteers

Germany's warning to Sweden apparently was only against direct aid to Finland, and did not cover the practice of allowing volunteers to fight for Finland.

Obviously the Nazi leaders are convinced that these volunteers are not sufficiently numerous or well trained to stem the Russian tide, a view that is widely shared outside of Germany.

The Reich has good reasons not to want Sweden to become a battle ground. The principal reason is that Swedish iron ore is vital to her military machine. Something like 50 per cent of the ore consumed in Germany comes from Sweden.

Altmark Never Entered Port, Norway Says

Did Not Get Chance To Discover British Prisoners, Oslo Holds

Special Cable to The Post

Oslo, Feb. 21.—Norwegian officials, desperately anxious to keep their country out of the European turmoil, complained today that press reports have failed to give a clear picture of the Altmark case.

On the one hand, they said, Great Britain has criticized Norway for failing to discover that the Altmark was carrying 300 British prisoners, and on the other Germany has denounced her for allowing British destroyers to invade her territorial waters and rescue the prisoners.

Claims Set Forth

The facts in the case of the German prison ship, it was said, were these:

The Altmark did not stop at Bergen or any other Norwegian port. However, the commander of a Norwegian torpedo boat did hail the Altmark and ask to look at her papers. Having satisfied himself that the papers were satisfactory and that she was a German government ship bound for a German port, he allowed her to proceed.

This, it was insisted, was entirely in accordance with international law, which permits a foreign ship to proceed through neutral territorial waters.

The Altmark, it is true, afterward used her radio, which is forbidden to foreigners in Norwegian territorial waters. The Norwegian torpedo boat commander called this to the attention of the Altmark captain, who apologized and promised to respect the law.

Faced Superior Force

Even if Norway had known that the Altmark had prisoners aboard, it is contended, she could not, under international law, have detained the ship. No such provision is contained in international law.

If, however, the Altmark had gone into a Norwegian port without a good reason—lack of fuel, a breakdown of machinery, etc., then Norway would have been justified

Nazis Insist Rumania Sell Full Oil Quota

Clodius to Demand Rescinding of Ban On Aviation Fuel

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Feb. 21.—Germany tonight challenged Rumania's ban on shipments of high test aviation gasoline to the Reich by deciding to send her ace economic negotiator, Dr. Karl Clodius, back to Bucharest to insist upon full delivery of her 1940 quota, it was learned authoritatively here.

Not only will Germany's future attitude toward Rumania most likely depend upon the outcome of Clodius' mission, but also her view of all other neutral southeastern European countries.

Caught in a perilous economic grapple between German and Allied demands for the lion's share of her oil exports, Rumania earlier today was reported to have assured Britain and France she would prohibit the export of aviation gasoline to the Reich.

A government decree to this effect was understood to have been issued in direct contradiction to a recent arrangement with Germany.

The capitulation to British-French pressure was reported to have been decided upon in the face of serious losses of Rumanian industry unable to obtain cotton, wool, jute and iron ore from the Allies, who shut

Druggist's Fish Beats Roosevelt's

Aboard U. S. S. Lang, Feb. 21 (AP) via wireless).—President Roosevelt, still combining business with pleasure, fished near a Costa Rican island today but he didn't get the biggest one.

George Fox, a White House pharmacist, landed the largest prize, a 45-pound wahoo, a blue food fish.

For the rest of the Presidential party aboard the cruiser Tuscaloosa, said a laconic message from Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, secretary to the President, the fishing was "fair" but otherwise there was "no news."

Readers' Comment

In the homes, in the streets, in taxicabs and in street cars, readers yesterday added praise for The Post's new feature, "Our Town in Pictures," which appeared for the first time Sunday.

The eight-page section, revealing the day-to-day story of life in Washington's elementary public schools, won applause alike for educational value and for the quality of the photographic work.

Readers at the same time expressed eagerness to see the next edition of "Our Town," which will go behind the scenes of the District junior high schools and will depict also the training of teachers.

An Arlington woman remarked that the section "bolstered my confidence" in the younger generation."

George Horton, taxi driver of Arlington, Va., said: "Being a 'camera nut' I was particularly interested in the swell photographic job done in The Post's new section. The fellow who took those photos sure knew his job—and whoever laid out the page certainly used each picture to best advantage. It was an all-around bang-up piece of work."

A Washington mother whose work prevents her from visiting her son's classroom welcomed the pictorial insight into the school life. Said Mrs. Helen R. Aldrich, restaurant hostess, of 2703 Cortland place northwest: "I've been a Post 'fan' for a long time, but I think the paper has outdone itself with this new feature. I have a youngster in school and have frequently been distressed because my employment doesn't permit me to visit his classroom to see just how he is faring. Then along came 'Our Town in Pictures' and I got a grand idea of how my son is taught and the character of those who are teaching him."

Other comment included:

Miss Nell Monroestein Childs, Arlington, Va.: "It was grand. Although I'm a new subscriber to The Post, I have long considered it a leader in Washington. That section on District public schools brought back memories—had no idea how things had changed since my school days. It bolstered my confidence in the younger generation."

Miss Ellen Schultz, 2225 Fifteenth street northwest: "I was tremendously interested. The new feature is a vivid portrayal of modern teaching methods. I hope The Post

All Poland but Warsaw Area Barred to Red Cross by Nazis

By Frank L. Kluckhohn
Copyright by New York Times

Germany has barred American Red Cross aid for Poland except in the district about Warsaw, where prescribed activities by its representatives will be permitted by the Nazi conquerors.

This was revealed last night when Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, announced an agreement had been made with the German government by which American representatives will be permitted to observe the distribution of about $400,000 worth of medicines and clothing sent from the United States. Allocations of these relief supplies will be made to the Polish Red Cross and other representative Polish and Jewish agencies, working in conjunction with the German Red Cross.

Distribution of six carloads of supplies already in Cracow and eight others en route from Genoa to Cracow has been delayed during protracted diplomatic negotiations. As a result of the Nazi agreement that these supplies "will at no time be at the disposal of or claimed by the German authorities," James T. Nicholson of the American Red Cross staff in Berlin will return to Cracow to supervise distribution, Davis said.

The Nazis hold, however, that Pomerania, Silesia and other component parts of "German Poland"

G. W. WAS ALSO HUMAN

The Roosevelt clan is related to the Washington clan, and therefore to the Emperor Charlemagne, who was an ancestor of G. W.'s great-great-great-grandmother, Peggy Butler Washington, who lived about 1600.

The latest New Deal version of G. W.'s anti-third term tradition is that he didn't think it was fair for the Republic to expect a man to suffer the bruises of the Presidency for more than two terms. The Republicans agree with this but from a different angle.

Barton Backs Continuance Of Trade Pacts

We Should Take Useful Goods, Not Useless Gold, Republican Says

By the Associated Press

Representative Barton (Republican), New York, joined the House Democratic majority yesterday in the fight to continue the Hull reciprocal trade system for another three years.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the federation of young Republican groups of greater New York, Barton pictured the tariff-cutting pacts as a means of stimulating two-way trade between the United States and other nations.

"We need to export in order to keep our economic machine running at maximum efficiency," he said. "It is a matter of common sense that we should take useful goods—rather than, to us, useless gold—in exchange for our imports."

On the House floor, meanwhile, Representative Reed (Republican), of New York, delivered a burning denunciation of the trade pacts. He contended that increased exports of which Democrats "boasted" were attributable to shipments of war materials to Russia and Japan rather than the pacts.

"While you are padding your export figures with this war traffic," he cried, "don't forget that the United States is going to be the most-hated nation in the world—hated by those who have suffered from our war exports of death and destruction; despised as a shylock by those from whom you are extracting blood money for war materials."

Barton was the first House Republican to support the pacts publicly. Representatives Coffee, of Nebraska, Disney of Oklahoma and Cannon, of Florida, are Democrats who have criticized the program.

The House may take a vote on the issue tomorrow night.

even greater majorities. Administration membership in the old Long "potato legislature," so called because Huey once boasted he bought legislators "like sacks of potatoes," was cut from almost 100 per cent to well under 50 per cent.

Gov. Long declined comment, saying only that he would issue a statement when I saw official returns from yesterday's runoff primary for the Democratic nomination, tantamount to election. He summoned his crestfallen administration leaders to Baton Rouge for a conference.

He refused to concede defeat, although unofficial returns tonight showed 1,651 of 1,703 precincts gave Jones 278,593 votes; Long, 257,829.

Mayor Robert S. Maestri of New Orleans, the machine leader, however, extended Jones his congratulations, despite the fact Jones pledged on the stump to prosecute Maestri for the recovery of more than a million dollars the mayor made in an oil deal the Federal Government has questioned.

"Citizens Should Abide"

"Sam Jones has been nominated Governor, and I congratulate him," Maestri said in a statement. "The people have spoken and all good citizens should abide by the result."

Jones today put forward a complete "house-cleaning" program designed to sweep out many much-criticized practices developed during the 12 years in which Huey or his political heirs ruled the State. The Federal Government alleges many politicians pillaged the State in recent years. Numerous prosecutions are under way.

"The necessary legislative safeguards must be enacted to prevent forever the recurrence of the debauchery, the shame and the corruption of these past few years in Louisiana," Jones said.

"Dictatorial laws must be abolished. Courts must be placed above reproach. Our schools must be revitalized . . .

"Even-Handed Justice"

"Even-handed justice will be meted out in Louisiana while I am Governor. The guilty will be punished, and the innocent protected. There will be prosecution wherever the evidence justifies, but there will not be any persecution under me."

Jones said he had but an inkling of the financial problems to be faced, because many State records are secret under law.

Jones said he would go West on vacation, probably to visit relatives in Tucson, Ariz., and in California, before plunging into his work.

NLRB Aides Helped Fight Act Changes, Probers Hear

Regional Directors, Former Secretary Named to Committee

Regional directors of the National Labor Relations Board aided in a campaign conducted last year to fight amendments to the Wagner act, the Smith Committee was informed yesterday.

With Benedict Wolf, former board secretary, on the stand, Committee Counsel Edmund M. Toland introduced numerous letters between Wolf and regional directors discussing formation of committees to defend the Wagner act.

Wolf, who left the Labor Board in November, 1937, testified that in December, 1938, he proposed an active campaign in a conference with Board Chairman J. Warren Madden and other NLRB officials.

"At that conference, the members of the board didn't view the situation with as much gravity as I did," Wolf observed, adding that "their feeling was that the board's record was such that a presentation of that record to Congress would in itself prevent amendments."

Wolf told the committee the board officials informed him "they would have no objection to what I might care to do with regard to a move to oppose amendments, but that they would take no active part, and certainly not the lead, in any such opposition."

At about that time, Wolf testified, he wrote all the board's regional directors except Nathaniel S. Clark, Milwaukee director, urging them to induce local A. F. of L. unions to inform the A. F. of L. leadership of their opposition to A. F. of L. amendments.

Wolf said that he wrote Nathan Witt, board secretary, that he had omitted Clark "because of his A. F. of L. friends."

The witness declared that he subsequently wrote several of the regional directors to ask their assistance in forming committees to conduct a "campaign of education" against the proposed amendments.

Letters that Toland offered in evidence disclosed that Wolf had put forward names of numerous educators, ministers, lawyers and labor experts as possible members of these committees, and the regional directors in their replies proposed still more names.

The committee decided to exclude from the record all the names mentioned by either Wolf or the directors, on the ground, said Chairman Smith, that "private individuals who may have participated in this campaign to defeat the amendments to the act" had "a perfect right" to do so.

Prior to Wolf's testimony, Robert L. Condon, board attorney and former official of the N. L. R. B. union, was questioned as to the possibility that the board had been harboring a "company union."

After hearing testimony that the union had used a board auditorium and had distributed union literature on board time, Representative Routzohn (Republican), of Ohio, maintained that the board had held that such practices in private industry were characteristic of "company domination."

Condon protested that other Government unions did the same thing, and that in industry the question of company domination arose only with respect to discrimination between unions.

The Political Arena

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Thomas E. Dewey's campaign headquarters tonight announced he would enter the New Jersey preferential primary of May 21, and renewed his challenge to other Republican Presidential aspirants to contend with him.

DEWEY

Manager J. Russel Sprague said he hoped that Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and all other candidates for the Republican Presidential nomination will file in New Jersey."

Previously, Dewey's name had been entered in preferential primaries in Illinois, April 9, and Wisconsin, April 2.

"The primary situation is virtually the same in New Jersey as it is in Illinois," said Sprague. "In neither State is there a question of a 'favorite son.'

"We regret that neither Senator Taft nor Senator Vandenberg saw fit to accord to the voters of Illinois the privilege of choosing between the leading contenders for the Republican nomination."

Charles P. Sisson, a comanager, said Dewey probably would make one speech in Illinois and might visit Wisconsin prior to the primaries. Dewey is scheduled to make an address March 6 at Lincoln, Nebr.

Pennsauker, N. J., Feb. 21 (INS).—The "wrecking crew" to undermine the constitutional form of government and free enterprise in America is "already on the job" in Washington, Rep. J. William Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania, asserted here tonight.

Speaking at a Washington birthday eve Republican rally, Ditter denounced the Roosevelt Administration as a "failure" and said "false prophets" were seeking to undermine the "rich heritage" of government founded by George Washington. He asked:

"Will you follow the lead of a cardboard Caesar, a self-anointed messiah, a dangerous egoist, who talks recklessly of quarantining aggressor nations in Europe? Or will you stand firm with Washington for the avoidance of any entanglement in European affairs?"

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 21 (AP).—The philosophy that America is spent has guided the Government for seven years, Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, charged tonight, adding that "it is the underlying philosophy of New Deal legislation."

BRIDGES

Addressing a Lincoln Club dinner, the candidate for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination said "the American people do not accept this philosophy" and are "determined to preserve their tradition of a free government and a free economy."

"We can save our democratic Government only through a return to a limited government of laws responsible only to the people. We can save the national credit and the savings of our people only by sound fiscal policies.

"We can preserve a free economy only by preserving the freedom and opportunity of the individual to exercise his energy and his genius . . . We can go forward only by encouraging the human qualities that have always made for success—industry, initiative and thrift."

24 in House Declare War On Idleness

Conference Called For Monday to End U. S. Unemployment

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

A House group of 20 Democrats and 4 Republicans yesterday asked all their colleagues to join them in "an incessant war on unemployment" and to attend a conference Monday on the unemployment problem.

The invitation, issued over 24 signatures, said, "this is not a move to form a 'bloc' or to gain political advantage for any person or any party or any political program."

Observers interpreted it, however, as a move by Democratic liberals in the House to focus public attention on the domestic issue of unemployment, as against the "distraction" of the European war.

In addition to Representatives Burdick, of North Dakota; Crawford, of Michigan; Johns, of Wisconsin, and Oliver, of Maine (Republicans), signers include Representatives Scrugham, of Nevada, chairman of the Democratic Steering Committee; Coffee, of Washington, leader of the House Democratic liberal bloc, and Voorhis, of California, originator of the idea.

Meanwhile, Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Board urged liberalization of State unemployment compensation laws, in the current issue of the Social Security Bulletin.

The letter of the 24 Representatives asserted that "unemployment is the first and most fundamental problem before this Congress and before the Nation today."

"If we do all other things and fail to overcome this problem," it continued, "we shall in the largest sense have failed."

Representative Scrugham said he hoped the meeting would "focus attention on the necessity of expanding the CCC program—as the public doesn't realize the seriousness of the slash in the budget."

According to Representative Voorhis, some of the questions to be answered are: "How does cutting down WPA affect unemployment?" "What is the relation between this and farm income?" "What has monopoly got to do with it?"

Other Representatives who signed the letter are: Bryson, of South Carolina; Casey, of Massachusetts; Ellis, of Arkansas; Thomas F. Ford, of California; Havenner, of California; Hill, of Washington; Izac, of California; Jacobsen, of Iowa; Johnson, of Oklahoma; Kefauver, of Tennessee; Keller, of Illinois; Leavy, of Washington; Massingale, of Oklahoma; Murdock, of Utah; Murdock, of Arizona; Smith, of Washington, and Sparkman, of Alabama.

Altmeyer stated: "The only permanent long-range program on the statute books which attempts to cope with the problem of unemployment is the Federal-State system of employment security embodied, in the social-security program. It is imperative, therefore that we strengthen and improve this permanent part of our program."

Chairman Smith yesterday introduced a bill granting the investigating committee another $50,000 to carry on its inquiry.

Meanwhile, the N. L. R. B. moved Alexander B. Hawes, assistant general counsel, to the newly created position of deputy to Witt. Hawes will handle labor dispute cases and the coordination of the board's field force.

Four on SEC Favor Hanes as Trustee Of Associated Gas System, Frank Reveals

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Four of the five members of the Securities and Exchange Commission do not believe former Undersecretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes is disqualified by law from serving as trustee for the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, key holding company in the billion dollar Associated Gas & Electric system.

This was revealed by Chairman Jerome Frank of the SEC yesterday in a letter to Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, who previously had written Frank protesting against published reports that Hanes was being considered as trustee.

Both the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation and the Associated Gas & Electric Co., top holding company in the system, are in the Federal Court for the Southern New York District for reorganization under the Chandler Bankruptcy Act. The SEC has asked the court to appoint a trustee for each of the companies.

Expectation is that a law firm will be named trustee for the Associated Gas & Electric Co.

Sponsored by Bankers

Frank disclosed that Hanes already had told the commission that New York banking interests were supporting him for the trusteeship. In view of that fact, he explained, four of the commission members do not feel there is need for any further investigation of the sponsorship of Hanes, as Norris had suggested.

He revealed, however, that Commissioner Edward C. Eicher, sponsor of the division which carries out the commission's functions under the Chandler Act, had disagreed with the other four members and felt that Hanes should be disqualified.

It was by a four-to-one vote that the SEC rejected the suggestion that it serve as trustee for the companies. Eicher was the one dissenting member.

Norris, in a letter replying to Frank, said he felt the facts which the latter disclosed constituted a "complete vindication" of the reasons set forth in his previous letter for the rejection of Hanes as trustee.

"In my opinion," he declared, "such appointment under the circumstances would not only be shocking to the public, but would constitute a plain violation of the spirit if not the letter of the Chandler Act."

Before his letter was received by the SEC, Norris was told, Hanes revealed to the commission that a member of the New York banking firm of Lazard Freres had first mentioned to him the desirability of his appointment as trustee. Subsequently, Hanes explained, other friends in the New York financial community, "among whom were officials of the Guaranty Trust Co., the Bankers Trust Co. and the Chase National Bank," suggested his appointment.

Wanted by Hopsons

Hanes also advised the commission, Frank said, that he was favored by Roger Whiteford, Washington attorney who was made president of the companies a few weeks ago "at the instance of the sisters and a brother-in-law of Mr. Hopson (Howard C. Hopson, dominant figure in the Associated Gas and Electrical system)." Whiteford this week resigned as president.

"The commission," Frank said, "also is aware of the fact that Mr. Hanes was formerly engaged in the investment banking business. A majority of the commission believes that those facts do not constitute a statutory disqualification of Mr. Hanes as one of the trustees."

Norris maintained that the facts outlined by Frank showed that the Hopson interests, "whose management brought the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation into general disrepute," together with Wall street banks, combined with Hanes' cooperation and consent to obtain his appointment as trustee.

As a result, he said, "it is incredible that the court would give further reconsideration to the appointment of Mr. Hanes." Security holders "who have suffered tremendous losses," he declared, "would never have any confidence in a trustee who could be suspected of owing his appointment in any way to the intervention of the Hopson management and of Wall Street bankers."

Meanwhile, Howard C. Hopson's connection with two law firms which from 1934 to 1939 reputedly did a $500,000 business with operating companies in the Associated Gas and Electric system, were cited before the Federal Power Commission investigation of practices followed by Hopson service companies with respect to A. G. & E. operating companies in Pennsylvania.

D'Alesandro Lauds Study Of 2 Homes

Commissioners Order Immediate Survey Of Medical Needs

Opening by the Commissioners of an immediate medical survey of the inmates at the Home for Aged and the Receiving Home was commended last night by Chairman D'Alesandro of the House District subcommittee investigating the two institutions.

Earlier yesterday, Commisioner George C. Allen ordered the survey be made by Health Officer George C. Ruhland. This was in response to D'Alesandro's demands the day before that immediate steps be taken to correct shortcomings reported at the recent public hearings.

"I am glad the Commissioners have decided they could undertake improvements in the welfare institutions without requesting additional funds," Representative D'Alesandro stated.

Health Officials Meet

Last Saturday, Welfare Director Bondy met with Dr. Ruhland, Dr. Edgar Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, and Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer. They discussed the feasibility of making a medical survey of the 130 inmates confined to the infirmary at the Home for the Aged and a mental examination of the abnormal inmates at the institution.

Infirmary patients found to need hospital care would be transferred to Gallinger, where mental disorders in patients required attention, they would be sent to St. Elizabeths.

They also spoke of examining all children at the Receiving Home when brought in for detention. This is one of the deficiencies brought out at the inquiry.

Bondy yesterday put this discussion in the form of a formal request of Dr. Ruhland, but stated:

"Patchwork will give but partial and temporary meeting of deficiencies in the public welfare program of the District that exist because of years and even decades of inadequate appropriations and restrictive legislation."

He said "second-hand institutions cannot be patched forever."

The health officer assigned two members of his staff, Dr. Carl C. Dauer and Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, to study medical needs at the Receiving Home. Whether the Home has facilities for isolating children with communicable diseases and health of the food handlers will be considered.

A report is expected by tomorrow. Dr. Ruhland will turn this over to Bondy.

One Survey Ordered

Dr. Bocock has already received instructions from Dr. Ruhland to begin his medical survey at the Home for Aged. Food handlers at the institution will be examined through laboratory tests at the District Health Department. It was brought out at the hearings that inmates aiding in the serving of meals were not examined for communicable diseases.

Bondy said he agreed with Dr. Ruhland that the Home for Aged needed a full-time medical officer, a graduate nurse service the 24 hours and an adequate orderly and attendant staff along with proper physical plant and facilities.

Corcoran Cadets Note 57th Anniversary With Memorial, Reunion and Smoker

WILLIAM C. CARTER W. C. BATES C. S. HEFFNER "KID" SULLIVAN

In their scrapbook of newspaper clippings, these four veterans of the Corcoran Cadets at last night's fifty-seventh reunion read the account of "Kid" Sullivan's ring battle with Sailor Heinie Orchard in Washington in 1919, when both fighters were over 40

Veterans of the Corcoran Cadets last night observed their organization's fifty-seventh anniversary with a reunion and smoker at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 920 Tenth street northwest.

Before a brief business meeting, at which all officers were reelected, Blair Shoemaker, in the buff tailcoat, blue trousers and plumed hat of the corps' dress uniform, broadcast its history from the studio of WOL. Taps was sounded for six members who died last year.

Today at 10 a. m., members will meet in St. Mary's Cemetery, as they have done since 1932, to lay a wreath on the grave of Maj. Eugene Edwards, their commander and president for half a century.

Shoemaker recalled how the Corcoran Cadets grew, in 1883, from an aggregation of 15-year-old boys living near Fifteenth and H streets northwest, who used to meet and drill with broomsticks along Vermont avenue. After the boys organized themselves into a military company, they held a fair and netted enough to purchase 40 old Army rifles, with which they drilled until the Government armed them in 1886.

In its long history, from 1883 until it was disbanded as a military unit in 1914, the company marched in every inaugural parade beginning with that of Grover Cleveland. Even after its dissolution, members continued to take part in inaugural parades until President Roosevelt ruled them out, along with other independent organizations, in 1937.

When it was organized, the Corcoran Cadets was one of any number of military companies in the District, all functioning under the militia system before formation of the National Guard. Among its companions were such companies as the Washington Light Infantry, the National Rifles, all of which have passed, even as memories.

The Corcoran Cadets was named for the late William W. Corcoran, financier, philanthropist and founder of the Corcoran Gallery of Art and the Louise Home. Of its charter members, 11 were at last night's reunion: Charles Boss, W. E. Colburn, Samuel C. Cotten, F. W. Duvall, A. B. Eaton, Dr. Frank E. Gibson, W. H. Groverman, S. H. Gwynne, Philip M. McKim, Maj. Charles A. Meyer, president; and Robert T. Smith.

Others present last night were S. H. Brennan, William C. Carter, Thomas Chick, C. A. Chism, Joseph G. Crown, Thomas B. Davis, S. B. Finkel, C. S. Heffner, Harry Hurley, A. D. Langley, R. M. Lawrenson, Herbert C. Leach, Louis Lowe, William McQueeney, Edward Mastin, Clarence A. Pearson, John F. Pyle, E. P. Rickenbacker, Harry T. Sheehy, George W. Swink, Walter E. Thompson, Joe Turner, and Clarence B. Wallace.

Officers elected last night, besides Maj. Meyer, were Groverman, vice president; W. N. Handiboe, secretary; Lieut. Col. Laurence Hazard, adjutant, and Dr. Gibson, surgeon. Maj. Meyer appointed to the executive committee, Shoemaker, chairman; Col. Hazard, Roy De Neale, Gail T. Judd, Samuel B. Kleindienst, Eugene Edwards, jr., Groverman, Robert T. Smith, Dr. Gibson and Handiboe.

Members who died last year and who were remembered by taps and a minute of silence, were Dr. John Exner, Dan Niepold, Dr. Elmer Sothoron, Frank E. Lanman, Mayo C. Mitchell, and Orlando H. Ross, an honorary member.

Included on the radio program was a recording of The Corcoran Cadet's March, by John Philip Sousa, played by the United States Marine Band.

Liquor Inquiry Plans to Call Board Chief

Welliver Accuses Beverage Control Unit of Prying

Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, will be invited to testify before the special House subcommittee investigating liquor licensing, Chairman Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said last night.

Eberharter said the charges leveled yesterday at the ABC board by its former counsel, Edward M Welliver, had convinced him that the inquiry should be continued at least another week before a decision is made as to whether to ask the House for funds to employ an investigator and attorney.

Welliver charged the ABC board and its chairman with a dictatorial "rule of fear" of local liquor licensees.

"We certainly want to give Mr. Lodge an opportunity to answer these charges," Eberharter said.

The chairman said Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, will be called upon to testify early next week and that spokesmen for several citizens' associations had asked to be heard.

Expressing doubt that the House would be willing to give the subcommittee money for a more thorough investigation at this time, Eberharter said he did not believe that the inquiury should be concluded now.

Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, has demanded that the subcommittee either hire an attorney and investigator and proceed "in an orderly fashion" or drop the investigation after the end of this week.

Welliver, who resigned as assistant corporation counsel February 1 because of ill health, told the subcommittee that the ABC Board subjected licensees "to the most minute examination of matters that have nothing to do with the questions at issue," and that Lodge "has a tendency to go into extraneous matters."

Licensees, he added, have shown a willingness to cooperate with the ABC Board in most matters of regulation, but the cooperative spirit has not been reciprocated.

Five Changes Urged

Welliver made five recommendations for changes in the liquor regulations. They were:

Repeal of the ban on Sunday sale of liquor.

Extension of the Sunday closing hour from midnight to 2 a. m.

Elimination of the prohibition against bars.

Prohibition of credit discounts on the sale of liquor by wholesale dealers.

Incorporation into law of the present regulation against the sale of liquor via curb service.

Welliver referred to rumors of "leaks" on confidential information emanating from the ABC Board's office despite a ruling by the Commissioners that attorneys were not to examine the files on liquor cases.

The former ABC Board attorney said he opposed a Government-operated dispensary system, although he complained that retailers with large capital were able to obtain advantages over poorer competitors in credit discounts.

Asked about rumors of sales of liquor to minors, Welliver said that they are exaggerated.

Insurance Death Plot Hinted In Weird Suicide, Slugging

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 21.—The mystery of the art galleries became a weird melodrama tonight with a disclosure that the suicide, John T. Geery, had insured the life of Milton B. Logan, a fellow executive, for $150,000, while seeking to negotiate the sale of $30,000,000 worth of art treasures of the Republic of China.

Logan, president of the American Art Association-Anderson Galleries, Inc., until its bankruptcy last August, was bludgeoned Monday night in a motorcar as Geery, who was the corporation's former secretary-treasurer, sat next to him. Both were under indictment for larceny—accused of having withheld some $65,000 from clients.

Accused of having been the third occupant of the automobile, and the man named by Logan as his actual assailant, was John Poggi, a heavy-shouldered newsstand operator, who was held without bail on a charge of suspicion of felonious assault.

Geery shot himself in his opulent Long Island home a few hours after the unconscious Logan had fallen, or been pushed, from the car into a rainy Manhattan street. Logan reported to the police another mysterious attempt had been made recently on his life; that a stranger had violently shoved him down a subway stairway some weeks ago.

The fact that Geery had taken out insurance policies from Lloyds of London upon his colleague's life, and had made himself the beneficiary, was made known by Assistant District Attorney Robert Thayer after a conference with Herbert Plaut, Geery's attorney.

Geery's reason for that step, as Thayer got it from Plaut, was that he was engaged in an important deal to dispose of Chinese art masterpieces in behalf of Chiang Kai-shek, the Chinese Nationalist generalissimo, and thus wanted to protect the firm.

Geery, the prosecutor was told, had stated, too, that he had heard Logan threaten to commit suicide.

The Chinese transaction was under discussion, Thayer said, in June, 1939—the time the policies were taken out—between Geery and a man named Eckelman, who was represented as the second in command of a German submarine during the World War.

The insurance, he added, was first made effective only for three months but, as time went on and the Chinese art objects never arrived, was renewed from month to month and still is in force.

100 Policemen Storm House For Suspect

By the United Press

Boston, Feb. 21.—A frenzied, unemployment janitor involved in the fatal shooting of an optometrist tonight, wounded one policeman and engaged 100 others in a gunbattle before being shot thrice and dragged from his barricaded lodging house.

Charles Spencer, 23, of Boston, was hospitalized with three bullet wounds in his chest, but doctors expected that he would recover.

Less than two hours earlier, Spencer's first victim, Dr. Bernardt B. Glickman, 32, died at the same institution. In another ward lay Sergt. James Culleton, who was shot in the neck and chest while trying to capture the fugitive.

For nearly an hour, Spencer had held off the huge squad of policemen who were armed with riot guns and equipped with tear gas bombs which they hesitated to hurl for fear of injuring other tenants trapped in the five-story building.

Finally a dozen officers rushed the building, crawled cautiously up through darkened hallways, kicked in the door of the apartment where the fugitive hid and shot him before he could return their fire.

Cowering in a corner they discovered his wife, a scrub woman at City Hospital, who was forced by her husband to remain with him during the battle.

Police said Spencer fired at least 15 shots during the battle, in which they fired more than 100 bullets into the building.

Spencer had been sought since late afternoon when his optometrist, Dr. Glickman, was fatally wounded in a jewelry store in the heart of Boston's shopping district.

According to employes, Spencer engaged in a loud conversation in the rear of the store with the doctor. Suddenly there was a shot and Spencer, thrusting his way through 12 customers, fled.

Glickman was taken to a hospital, where before he died he said:

"He was showing me the gun and it went off."

But police sent out a broadcast for Spencer's apprehension and Sergt. Culleton tracked him to his home.

Spokane Land Bank Chiefs Quit Over FCA Policies

By the Associated Press

Spokane, Feb. 21.—The president and vice president of the Federal Land Bank of Spokane and a member of the President's staff resigned today in protest against the policies of Gov. A. G. Black of the Farm Credit Administration and secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

They were E. M. Ehrhardt, for 13 years head of the institution which serves 35,000 member-stockholders in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana; Ward K. Newcomb, vice president and an official with the bank since 1925, and John R. Becker, who has served as auditor, comptroller and office manager for ten years. Resignations were to be effective March 1.

The resignation, which Ehrhardt released for publication, asserted the the bank had enjoyed an autonomous status until recently, when it came under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture.

"Meritorious as many of these (new) programs are, I do not believe the lending of money to sound agricultural enterprises can be mixed indiscriminately with all these activities successfully, or without making our cooperative credit system subservient to bureaucracy and partisan politics," Ehrhardt declared.

Pope to Receive Taylor in March, Vatican Reports

Vatican City, Feb. 21 (AP).—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal representative at the Vatican, will be presented to Pope Pius early in March, a Vatican City news service announced today.

The presentation will be similar to that arranged for ambassadors, except that Taylor's credentials will be presented in "the hall of the little throne" instead of the throne room proper.

For the first time in history, the news service reported, his Holiness had authorized sound films to be made of the presentation ceremonies, including conversation of the Pope and Taylor.

A private audience between the Pope and Taylor after the official reception is understood to be planned.

Admiral Bristol's Widow Is Ill; Injured in Auto

Mrs. Helen M. Bristol, widow of Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, U. S. N., was reported "seriously ill" at her home, 1621 Massachusetts avenue northwest, last night.

She was stricken Tuesday, according to Capt. E. H. Woods, attending physician, but has shown some improvements in the last 24 hours. Because of her advanced years, members of the family said last night they considered her condition "very serious."

Mrs. Bristol received severe injuries January 10 when she was involved in an automobile crash at Twentieth and P streets northwest. A spokesman at the Bristol home said her present condition is a "direct result" of the accident. Mrs. Bristol suffered several fractured ribs in the mishap.

Russia Calls Experts Home From Turkey

Departure at Once Ordered as Aukara Press Talks of War

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Feb. 21.—Russia today called home hundreds of Soviet technical experts employed for years in Turkish industry under a Russian-Turkish agreement.

Their exodus will follow closely that of technicians from Germany. Russia already was liquidating her commercial organizations in this country and Germany. Turkey's World War ally, is doing likewise.

The Russians, ordered by the Kremlin to leave immediately, were expected to embark with their families for Odessa, Russian Black Sea port. The Russian Embassy at Ankera notified those affected.

Press Talks of War

The Russian action came at a time when the Turkish press is discussing the possibility of war in this part of the world in the spring, perhaps centering about Russia's rich oil fields in the Caucasus, just across the Turkish border.

President Ismet Inonu and the Turkish general staff recently inspected the Russian frontier and they are expected to survey the Greek and Bulgarian border fortifications shortly.

Usually reliable quarters reported today that 50 British engineer officers had arrived at Adrianople to inspect the fortifications on the Bulgarian frontier, where work recently was stepped up by the army.

On War Footing

Turkey, an ally of Great Britain and France, but so far a nonbelligerent, is virtually on a war footing.

On February 8 Turkish marines suddenly seized the German-owned Krupp shipyards on Turkey's Golden Horn, and German technicians were discharged from jobs on which they had been outfitting Turkish submarines.

According to the Turkish press Turkey will enter the war the moment any foreign power attacks the Balkans. Intense military preparations, in cooperation with Britain and France, have been under way for months.

1,000,000 Reported Massing

Copyright, 1940, by the New York Times.

Rome, Feb. 21.—The force which the Allies are assembling in the Near East will reach as high as 1,000,000 men this spring, according to the correspondent of the Popolo Di Roma in a dispatch from Istanbul this morning.

The writer estimates the number of Anzacs at 100,000 now with another 100,000 coming soon. The Indians and Anzacs, he claims, are not coming through the Suez Canal but up the Persian Gulf and across Irak, since the canal is considered too vulnerable.

Immigration Quotas Filled For 11 Years

By the United Press

A huge backlog of alien applications for permission to enter the United States, sufficient to exhaust immigration quotas for years to come, has been built up by residents of Germany, Hungary and what used to be Austria, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, the State Department revealed yesterday.

All these countries, in addition to several smaller nations, sent their full quota of immigrants to the United States during the fiscal year ended last June 30, the department reported. Nevertheless, sufficient applications are on file to exhaust quotas for periods ranging from 11 years in Germany's case to 37 years in Hungary's.

The department released its report while a Senate immigration subcommittee was hearing oral opposition to the House-approved Dempsey bill to provide for deportation of aliens advocating "any change" in this country's form of government.

Reuben Oppenheimer, of Baltimore, speaking for the American Civil Liberties Union, charged that the bill would bring to the United States "the very thing we are fighting—Communism and Nazism." He said it was so vaguely worded that it would impose a gag on aliens.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations opposed the bill in a letter transmitted by General Counsel Lee Pressman. He described it as "inconsistent with our fundamental requirements of fair play and justice."

Cloyd Lapoete, speaking for the committee on Federal legislation of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, said the bill was "too vague" and that "there is no clear meeting of minds on what is a change in our form of government." Benjamin C. Marsh, representing the committe for cultural freedom, termed the proposal "a throwback to barbarism," and Henry T. Hunt, of the Washington chapter of the "Descendants of the American Revolution, urged adoption of amendments to define more definitely the term "any change" in the form of government.

Fierce Spahi Cavalrymen With Allies in Near East

Professional Men of War Under Command Of Gen. Weygand, Training and Drilling For Instant Action, Correspondent Writes

By Frazier Hunt
Famous Author and War Correspondent
Copyright by International News Service

With the French Army in Syria, Feb. 21.—"Go anywhere and see as much of my troops as you wish," Gen. Maxime Weygand said to me at his headquarters in Beirut. I took him at his word and for three days have been driving through this territory with a French staff officer, who was assigned to accompany me.

FRAZIER HUNT

It is the trip of a life time to travel through these ancient Syrian lands full of the historic ruins of great castles built by the Crusaders, and the Greek and Roman temples. But to visit these French fighting units from every corner of the empire, is like a tour of the world.

Today I lunched at the officers' mess of a "Spahi" regiment from Morocco, and tonight I had dinner with an infantry regiment from Tunis.

Moslem priests were calling their devout followers to evening prayers when I climbed the hill to the old barracks where the Tunis regiment is quartered.

Across the town rose a hill with a great fortress erected during the Crusades. Everything there were evidences of wars and fighting throughout the ages.

These colored infantrymen from Tunis were hard, tough fighting men and may have served from ten to fifteen years. This regiment was here before the war but now has been brought up to full strength. Everywhere in my 250-mile trip from Beirut I saw the same type of lean, seasoned men, equipped with the most modern weapons. Many of their white officers who have served for years in the same ouft swear that these men are equal to the best troops in the world.

But it was the "Spahis" from Morocco who interested me. These colorful special colonial cavalry still carry sabers and ride Arab horses, and they are exclusively Moslems.

Of all the French troops only the famous Foreign Legion equals them in romance and picturesqueness. Fighting is their profession. They would just as soon fight against the Germans as anybody, and probably more, because this regiment of "spahis" was part of French Gen. Jouinot Gambetta's cavalry division that served from 1916 on under the command of Marshal Franchet D'Esperey in the Anglo-French army at Saloniki opposing the Bulgars, Austrians and Germans.

Finally, in September of 1918, the "spahis" division cracked through the line and drove rapidly north to Budapest in one of the greatest cavalry movements in the history of arms. Several bearded Moroccans who were with this remarkable drive are still with this regiment." It is part of the splendid battle history of this regiment, and the newest volunteer recruit fresh from Morocco, talking nothing but Arabic, knows this heroic story.

I watched them as a squadron came riding in from maneuvers in the hills beyond the ancient city of Aleppo that once sat squarely athwart the routes of the camel caravans that spanned the entire Near East.

Every morning at daybreak the troops ride out, hardening the men and horses and doing battle problems. They are only carrying on the old traditions. These same hills and valleys have heard the sharp orders of captains of a score of different armies during the past 30 centuries. Many were foreign troops from distant shores talking strange tongues. These "Spahis" talk the language of Aleppo even if they came from almost a thousand miles away.

Here and everywhere I watched Gen. Weygand's army drilling and maneuvering. I was impressed with the fact that this was an army of business. These were professional soldiers knowing professional arms and the art of war. The old regiments have been brought up to war strength by bringing in drafts of men from Africa and France, but they are all well-trained.

Weygand's army makes a complete fighting unit down to the last detail. From the air corps to the modern tank corps it is on its toes and ready to go.

Germany to Insist on Rumanian Oil

down on their Rumanian trade to enforce their oil demands.

On the other hand the Germans charged that Allied and neutral oil producers alike in Rumania have refused since January 1 to supply the Reich with oil.

These producers are now soliciting long-term orders abroad so that these commitments will prevent Rumania's new oil commissioner from forcing them to divert even any small surplus to Germany.

Shipments Drop

Partly due to the fact that the Danube has been frozen and barge deliveries held up, Rumania's shipments of oil to Germany dropped to 26,000 tons in January, though she had agreed to deliver 130,000 tons.

Rumania's promises not to favor Germany now were reported to have resulted in immediate resumption of British shipment of arms and ore to this country. Practically all Allied exports dried up following the Rumanian agreement to increase oil shipments—amounting to about 30 per cent of her annual production—to Germany.

Besides putting the economic screws on Rumania, both Britain and France have pointedly reminded Bucharest that they might be compelled to reconsider their guarantees of Rumania's independence against aggression if King Carol's regime favored the Nazis in oil policy.

Today Rumania's unhappy position was emphasized further by notices which went out to youths born in 1921 and now living abroad ordering them to return for service in the army, now numbering 1,400,000 men. It was announced that wider measures would follow involving "all Rumanians capable of military service" and that an additional 200,000 men would be called to the colors March 1.

(Rumania's reply to a British demand for explanation of her oil policy was reported reliably in London to have included assurance that oil supplies to Germany would not be increased abnormally at the Allies' expense. Informed British sources said also that Rumania's promise of continued petroleum supplies to Britain and France at a normal level was a source of satisfaction to the Allies.

(British informants asserted the Allies felt that although on paper the Germans were allotted about 250,000 tons more oil in 1940 than in 1939 under the Rumanian program, this did not necessarily mean that all of it would get to Germany because of transportation difficulties.)

attacks in the face of constant Finnish shellfire.

(The Finns denied the Red army had captured Koivisto Fortress, western anchor of the Mannerheim Line, but the Soviet communique, issued in Moscow last night, repeated the Tuesday claim. On February 19 and 20, the Red army communique said, "Soviet troops occupied 176 of the enemy's defensive fortifications, including the Koivisto fortress area."

(Wednesday's fighting produced "nothing of importance" the Russians said.)

Extensive air raids signifying renewed Russian military activity in the Petsamo district of Arctic Finland, after weeks of quiet, were reported from Kirkenes, Norway, today.

Observers on the Norwegian border counted 52 planes flying in the direction of the road to Liinaharmi and southward.

A great number of bombs were reported to have been dropped on Ivalo at the south end of Lake Inari, causing considerable damage. Many of the planes continued southward in the direction of Rovaniemi and westward, heading apparently for places between Rovaniemi and the Swedish frontier.

Few Return

Only a few of the 52 planes sighted were reported to have returned the same way toward Russian territory.

The Finns counted on the weather to help them. The first blizzard of February today checked Russian bombers in southern Finland after yesterday's intense attacks by 800 planes, and it inspired new confidence among the defenders.

Finnish military strategy is helped by the snow and cold which usually strikes this country with greatest fury in February.

The weather is looked to not only to keep Russian planes grounded but also to cripple the activities of invading infantry and tank units.

Two ten-minute air-raid warnings were sounded in Helsinki this morning, but no bombings were reported.

The Finns reported relative quiet northeast of Lake Ladoga, although they said, "a few strong points were captured." Farther north, near Kuhmo, the Finns said they thwarted a Russian attempt yesterday to send reinforcements to surrounded detachments.

"Several fierce battles" were fought in the air Tuesday, the Finns said. They accused the Russians of machine-gunning a passenger train and bombing an infants' nursery. Despite the scope of yesterday's raids, however, only "a couple of civilians" were reported killed.

Japanese Call For a Strong Man

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Feb. 21.—The Japanese Parliament had a tense moment yesterday when Haruji Tahara, a member of the Social Mass Party, facing Premier Yonai, said, "We must have a strong man at the top—a Hitler, a Mussolini . . ."

The House gasped, remembering the affair last year when a member was expelled for saying that Japan needed a man like Mussolini, Hitler or Stalin, but Tahara concluded ". . . or a Roosevelt." Premier Yonai smiled, and the House relaxed.

Boy, 6, to Take Tibetan Rule In Rites Today

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
LINGERH LAMUTANCHU,

By the Associated Press

Lhasa, Tibet (Thursday), Feb. 22 (By Radio to Hongkong).—A great tide of emotion swept Lhasa this morning—dawn of the fateful day of enthronement for the solemn little Dalai Lama, "reincarnated" civil and religious ruler of this mysterious country.

The Chinese government had worked for months to put the succession of Ling-ergh La-Mu-Tan-Chu, beyond the fortunes of the golden urn from which the fourteenth Dalai Lama would normally be picked.

New Delhi, India, Feb. 21 (AP).—An intimate picture of the 6-year-old boy who is to benthroned tomorrow as the Dalai Lama, civil and religious ruler of Tibet, reached the outside world today in messages from a British mission in that remote and mysterious land of "Lost Horizon."

They disclosed the lad to be a plump, round-eyed little Chinese boy in apperance much like any other of his race, but possessed of an extraordinary composure and adult manher which is supposed to have convinced Tibetans of his authenticity as the reincarnation of the thirteenth Dalai Lama.

He is supposed to have been born at the moment the old Dalai Lama died on December 17, 1933.

In the enthronement of the lad, called Ling-Erh La-Mu-Tan-Chu (Ling-Erh the divine child), political forces are at work behind the scenes. (Ling-Erh is China's candidate for the exalted position, and his enthronement is regarded by the Chinese as strengthening their vague sovereignty over Tibet.)

The British have an interest in Tibet dating back to 1904 when Sir Francis Younghusband headed an expedition which penetrated to this distant land and established relations with it.

Preceding this mission to Lhasa was a Chinese mission under Gen. Wu Ching-Hsin, working to strengthen China's ties with Tibet.

The resourceful British mission disclosed in dispatches to New Delhi that when it was received by Ling-Erh it presented him with a toy automobile and a cuckoo clock. The lad immediately called his 8-year-old brother over to inspect them and explain their workings.

Garbed in a monk's dress, with his head shaved and sitting cross-legged on his high throne with five abbots standing in attendance, the lad laid his hands on the forehead of each of the British mission and blessed silk scarves which his chief ecclesiastical officer placed around the necks of Gould and a companion.

Then tea and rice were served, a court attendant first advancing to taste Ling-Erh's tea as a precaution against poisoning. Thereupon the boy drank solemnly from a wooden bowl held to his lips by an abbot responsible for his food.

Finally Ling-Erh was lifted down from his throne by two abbots and walked solemnly out of the reception hall holding their hands.

For his installation as Dalai Lama the lad goes to Potala palace, in Lhasa itself.

House Clears Path for Vote On Finn Aid

Banking Committee To Report Measure To Floor Tomorrow

By International News Service

Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, announced last night the way had been cleared for House action Monday on legislation that would permit the Export-Import Bank to make a $20,000,000 loan to Finland.

The bill, increasing the capital of the Export-Import Bank by $100,000,000, will be reported by the House Banking Committee unanimously tomorrow. Acting Chairman Williams (Democrat), of Missouri, said.

Representative Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, who had proposed two amendments, said he would withdraw them. He said he had been given assurances that the Export-Import Bank would not make any loans to aid imports in this country and that the Federal Reserve Bank of New York was not acting as a fiscal agent for warring European powers. His amendments would prohibit both.

Three hours of debate has been agreed upon in the House before a vote will be taken on the bill. Rayburn predicted it would pass by an overwhelming majority and be sent to President Roosevelt for his signature. It already has been approved by the Senate.

French to Reduce Youths in Army

Paris, Feb. 21 (AP).—The French army, already fully manned, will cut in half the next contingent of youths to be called to the colors in March.

A war ministry notice posted today said that only men born in July, August and September, 1919, would be included in the next call for a section of the class of 1939. The first half of the class was called up in November.

Authorities said the reduction was due to crowded facilities.

Finland Gets British Planes, Tanks, Guns

1,000 Hungarians Pass Through Paris To Join Volunteers

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 21.—British bombers and fighting planes, among them some Gloster "Gladiator" fighters, one of the latest and best types, already are in Finland to help the Finns against Russian air raiders bombing the country in swarms.

It was disclosed authoritatively tonight that between 40 and 50 of the British planes had reached the hard-pressed Finns and more were on the way.

Other British military equipment which already has gone to the Finns includes tanks, field guns, machine guns, antitank guns with ammunition, telephones, antigas supplies and clothing.

Many Hungarians on Way

A thousand Hungarian volunteers going through Paris today en route to Finland reported that 10,000 others are getting ready to leave Hungary. Most of the Hungarians, equipped with clothing resembling ski outfits, have had military service. They were traveling by way of London.

It was pointed out here that one of the difficulties of sending volunteers to aid Finland is the necessity of obtaining consent of Norway and Sweden to allow them to cross their territory. Thus far the Scandinavian countries have permitted this volunteer traffic, which has been relatively small.

The first large group of British volunteers for the Finnish army will leave London shortly. Britain has consented to recruiting by Finland in this country.

List of Shipments

British military equipment slated for Finland includes 150 antitank rifles, 10,000 antitank mines, 50,000 hand grenades, 25 howitzers, 100 machine guns, 24 antiaircraft guns, 30 field guns, 4 6-ton tanks, 12 6-inch guns, 10 3-inch mortars and ammunition for the artillery.

(The Gloster "Gladiator" as described in Jane's authoritative, "The World's Aircraft," is a single-seat, equal-span biplane powered with one Bristol "Mercury IX" nine-cylinder radial air-cooled and supercharged engine. It has two machine guns mounted on troughs in the sides of the fuselage and two mounted below the lower wing, firing outside the propellar radius. The plane is rated at maximum speed of 250 miles an hour at 15,500 feet, can climb 20,000 feet in nine minutes and has a service ceiling of 32,800 feet. It has full day and night flying equipment, oxygen equipment and transmitting and receiving radio. Similar planes have been supplied to Scandinavian countries, Belgium, Portugal and other foreign purchasers.)

Hull Appoints Mrs. Logsdon As Chief of Budget Affairs

She Is Third Woman Divisional Head In Department

By the Associated Press

Secretary Hull has brought to three the number of women divisional chiefs in the State Department.

He has appointed Mrs. Ella A. Logsdon, of Tyndall, S. Dak., to be head of the department's fiscal and budget affairs.

The others are Mrs. Ruth B. Shipley, chief of the passport division, and Mrs. Blanche R. Halla, chief of the office of coordination and review.

The three women executives are veterans in the State Department service, totaling among them 68 years of duty. All started as stenographers or clerks.

Began As Teacher

Mrs. Logsdon becomes head of an office which prepares the department's budget and steers it through Congress. She has been assistant chief of the office since 1937.

She became a school teacher after graduation from the State Normal School of South Dakota but managed to take a course in accountancy. She entered Government service in 1918 as a clerk in the War Department. She has been with the State Department since 1920.

Mrs. Shipley heads a division whose income is about $1,000,000 a year. She supervises the issuance of thousands of passports and renewals annually.

Recently she has directed a complete revision of the passport system so as to avoid fraudulent use by spies and other persons. She has inaugurated a method of thumb-printing passports to prevent their being counterfeited, and her own thumb-print has gone on a large number of them.

Born in Maryland

Mrs. Shipley, born in Montgomery County, Md., entered Government service as a patent office clerk in 1903. She went to the State Department in 1914 and became chief of the passport division in 1928.

Mrs. Halla, a native of the Capital, directs the checking of all communications before they leave the department, to see that they contain no errors. She is an expert on diplomatic style.

Mrs. Logsdon succeeds Charles B. Hosmer, who becomes assistant to Breckinridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State in charge of the foreign service. Japan Concerned About 'Naval Race'

Tokyo (Thursday), Feb. 22 (AP).—A Japanese admiralty spokesman declared that the United States' decision to build 45,000 ton battleships meant the start of a "naval race" and that Japan felt "grave concern."

He declined to discuss Japan's plans in the "naval race" but said the United States' decision would result in "other nations building larger ships, thereby reducing the value" of America's other battleships.

in interning the vessel. But as it was, Great Britain had no grounds for a protest.

As for the German argument that the Norwegians should have prevented the British destroyers from going into Jossing Fjord to rescue the 300 prisoners from the Altmark, the answer here is that the commander of the Norwegian torpedo boat did protest when the British said they were going after the Altmark.

The destroyers left, but later returned. The commander of the Cossack told the Norwegian commander that he had orders from the British government to proceed to Jossing Fjord and free the prisoners on the Altmark, with or without the permission of the Norwegian government.

Against the protests of the Norwegian commander, the Cossack and another destroyer went after the Altmark.

There were five British destroyers against two small Norwegian torpedo boats. For the Norwegians to have put up a fight, it is said here, would have been suicidal and to no avail.

British Arm Fishing Boats Against Planes

2 Report Successful Fights as Germans Claim 3 Sinkings

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 21.—Neutral shipping bore the brunt of mounting sea war losses today as the British admiralty evinced new determination to protect vessels from German attacks and claimed a high rate of destruction of enemy submarines.

The admiralty disclosed fishing ships were being equipped with "stingers"—antiaircraft weapons—to fight off German aerial attacks such as Nazi planes carried out on a wide scale yesterday.

One trawler reported driving off a German raider with gunfire and another group of fishing craft told of damaging a German plane with raking crossfire.

(A German communique declared two British minelayers and an armed merchant ship were sunk during the raids.)

German Bight Raided

Royal Air Force planes during the night carried out scouting flights over Helgoland Bight, an arm of the North Sea, where important German aviation and naval bases are situated.

Such scouting flights were given new significance by Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration in the House of Commons that "our preparations for meeting and countering air attacks, on whatever scale they may take place, are continuously being developed."

Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, asserted recent successes showed his statement December 6, that the British navy was sinking from two to four German U-boats a week, "was in no way exaggerated."

New shipping casualties counted today were:

The 8,971-ton Netherlands tanker Den Haag, owned by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey through a subsidiary, sunk by an unexplained explosion while nearing England on a New York-Rotterdam voyage, with 26 of her crew still missing. The captain and 12 seamen were picked up by a British steamer after drifting for 75 hours. One lifeboat was found empty.

The Netherlands trawler Petten, 270 tons, reported sunk by a mine in the North Sea. Her crew was saved.

The 4,760-ton Netherlands freighter Tara, which sank 60 miles southwest of Cape Finisterre, France, loaded with South American wheat. Her crew of 34 was rescued.

327 Norwegians Lost

The Norwegian steamer Ala, 933 tons, which sank after striking a wreck off the Breton coast.

The 2,476-ton Norwegian steamer Steinstad, sunk by a submarine in the Atlantic Thursday. Eleven survivors reached shore and 13 are missing.

In addition the Norwegian freighter Telnes, 1,694 tons, was almost a month overdue and feared lost. She was carrying a general cargo from Portland, Me., and New York.

Dispatches from Norway announced that nation's war losses totaled 49 ships aggregating 168,527 tons and that 327 Norwegian lives had been lost.

Roosevelt-Pledged Man Unchallenged

the President, a challenge appeared imminent of the President's right to appear on the Illinois primary ballot without a signed declaration. Dickering was in prospect between the State's Garner people and rebel factions of the Democratic machine dissatisfied with the State office slate.

Reports that 74-year-old Gifford Pinchot would enter the Pennsylvania senatorial primaries as an independent, attempting a comeback over Democratic and Republican nominees, met a polite "no comment" at the former Governor's home here.

Jay Cooke, Philadelphia Republican, city committee chairman, was expected to be Pennsylvania's Republican primary entry, while Senator Guffey thus far was unopposed as Democratic primary candidate. Walter A. Jones was mentioned as a possible opponent of Guffey, as Pennsylvania Democratic organization leaders gathered in Miami for talks.

Reports of a "stop Dewey" campaign in Wisconsin by Taft and Vandenberg forces were denied here by the Ohio and Michigan Republican Senators. Both New York District Attorney Dewey and Senator Vandenberg have entered the Wisconsin Republican primaries. Taft refused to enter.

In Topeka, Kans., Secretary of War Woodring left no doubt he believes the President will not run. He urged Kansas Democrats there to nominate a favoite son, Associated Press dispatches said.

In Chicago, Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State under Wilson, told the Union League Club that "reelection of Mr. Roosevelt or the continuation of the New Deal, is more than the country can endure or survive."

Senator Wheeler's failure to enter the Ohio primaries was said to be premised entirely on the State organization's entry of a Roosevelt-pledged ticket. Wheeler has said he would enter no State primaries against the President.

Friends of the Montanan said last night Wheeler is not likely to enter any other primary contest, but will continue his fight for the nomination through the convention. His strategy would be changed, and he might yet enter the Ohio primaries, should the President make known his views before Ohio's mid-March filing date.

Former Gov. White, of Ohio, once rumored as a possible Garner manager in Ohio, talked with both the Vice President and Senator Donahey during his visit here yesterday. Since White has allowed his name to be used for delegate on the organization's "favorite son" ticket, it was thought unlikely he will participate in a Garner campaign in the State. Reports persisted that White will seek the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, in which event he will need organization backing.

Coalition Denied

Milwaukee, Feb. 21 (AP).—Laurence Hall, of Madison, chairman of the Vandenberg-for President Club in Wisconsin, denied tonight that any coalition existed between Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, in connection with Washington reports Taft would stay out of the Wisconsin Presidential primary on April 2.

Italian Military Attache Says War May Last for 30 Years

Gen. Infante, Arriving on Saturnia, Declares His Nation Is Striving to Stay At Peace, but Arming Just in Case

New York, Feb. 21.—Brig. Gen. Adolfo Infante, newly appointed Italian Military Attache to the United States, arrived today on the Italian liner Saturnia. In his capacity as an active, veteran artillery officer he predicted that the European conflict might last "30 years," insisting that it will never be a quick war, like the one in Poland."

Gen. Infante served during the World War in command of an artillery unit, and recently was in command of artillery forces in Tripoli. He was military attache for almost five years in London.

"Italy is working hard to be prepared to enter the conflict, if her interests are endangered. She is striving to keep the peace in the south of Europe, the Balkans, but is strengthening her air, army and navy forces," he reported. He emphasized that European belligerent powers had reverted to the seventeenth century in the conduct of the present war.

"This war is different from all other modern wars. In the seventeenth century they tried to win wars without great battles, as it was too expensive. So now the great powers are following this same system of attempting to win through economic pressure. They are testing out each other's strength in the air and on the sea, before deciding to engage in big battles. And the air and the sea will be the deciding factors in weakening adversaries.

"The balance of power of the nations in combat are equal in strength, we believe in Italy."

Gen. Infante said that Italy and Germany had the same interests. "The Italian and German peoples are different, it's true, just as are the British and the French," he explained.

As for the Soviet invasion of Finland, he shook his head in disdain: "The people of the street in Italy just cannot understand it," he said, demanding to know if the Finns were still fighting as strongly as ever. He agreed that Italians were still as bitter as formerly against the Soviet invasion.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Infante, and their children, Diana, Giovanella, Carlo and Neri.

Among the total of 619 passengers arriving on the liner were 250 refugees from greater Germany and Hungary.

British Foray In Arctic Denied

Copyright by New York Times

Olso, Norway, Feb. 21.—The Norwegian admiralty was unable to confirm rumors here today of a sea battle off Norway and other reports that the British fleet was en route to Petsamo, northern Finnish port.

Messages from Tromsoe, in northernmost Norway, tonight said that a violent gale was raging which would effectively prevent any naval encounter or transport of any kind, and fishermen said they had seen no signs of British naval activity.

Bayonets Invoked In Clipper Search

the captain to that deck, where the mail bags were stowed.

Lorber glanced at the show of force.

"The situation," he said, "now is obviously out of my hands. May I trouble you for a receipt for this mail?"

Once ashore, Lorber wrote a formal protest against the seizure, signed by him and by George Wardman, Pan-American Airways' Bermuda representative.

The censors removed half of the 5,200 pounds of mail, a record load for the eastbound crossing. Retained for censoring were all letters not addressed to England or France. Included among the mail censored were letters destined for Germany, Italy, Sweden, Portugal, the Azores, and other points.

Clipper mail loads have decreased steadily since the censorship at Bermuda, the only point at which the British can censor clipper mail, was established. Westbound as well as eastbound letters are removed regularly by the censors.

No clash of authority has occurred since the first day. The censors are given a free hand, and the American Government has stipulated that certain classes of postal merchandise, to which the censors might object, cannot be consigned to Europe by clipper.

The censorship is so complete that passengers arriving in Bermuda with empty envelopes for air mail "covers" carrying Bermuda stamps for mailing to the United States are required to open them for examination.

Army Shifts Troop Units For Efficiency

Changes Intended To Permit Better Training of Divisions

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Army last night ordered a reshuffling of troop units throughout the United States in an effort to weld five new divisions into more closely-knit fighting machines.

Effective about June 1, some 7,500 troops will move to new home stations, concentrating each of the new divisions in the same corps area in so far as possible. The changes are designed to permit more frequent training of divisions as units and quicker mobilization.

Officials said the order probably will bring the most extensive permanent reassignment of troops in peace-time history.

Strength Little Changed

While Secretary Woodring and other Army chiefs have long urged abandonment of many military posts and grouping of scattered units on a few large reservations, the present move does not change the strength of the posts greatly, it was said. Congressional action will be necessary to abandon any stations or create new ones.

Fort George G. Meade, Md., and Fort Hoyle, Md., are the only nearby posts affected. Meade will lose the Headquarters Company and Company I of the Sixty-sixth Light Tank Regiment, some 13 tanks and 200 men who will be transferred to Fort Benning, Ga., where they now are temporarily stationed. The Eighth Medical Battalion at Hoyle will move to Fort Devens, Mass.

Most of the organizations affected are now away from their home stations for maneuvers and are expected to move directly to their new posts from Southern and Western war game areas late in the spring.

Under the reassignment, units of the First Division will be stationed in the First and Second Corps Areas and entirely within the area of the First Army. Division headquarters will remain at Fort Hamilton, N. Y.

The Second Division, less the Thirty-eighth Infantry, will remain at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. The Thirty-eighth Infantry will remain at Fort Sill, Okla., and Fort Douglas, Utah.

The Third Division will be stationed entirely within the Ninth Corps Area, with most of its units at or in the vicinity of Fort Lewis, Wash., headquarters.

The Fifth Division will be entirely within the Fifth Corps Area except for the Second Infantry, which is at Forts Wayne and Brady, Mich., and Sheridan, Ill. Division headquarters will be at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. All units will be within the Second Army area.

Sixth Division in Fourth Area

All of the Sixth Division, except the First Field Artillery, remaining at Fort Sill, Okla., will be in the Fourth Army Area. Division headquarters will be at Fort Snelling, Minn.

Special antiaircraft, heavy artillery, engineer and other troops will remain widely dispersed, it was said, though many of the essential units for one corps will be located in the Fourth Corps Area, where they will be convenient for future corps maneuvers. Tank and mechanized units will be located in each of the four Army areas.

Coinciding with the announcement of the changes, Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, said he planned to leave here by plane about March 3 for an inspection of military installations in Hawaii. The Army chief recently returned from an aerial trip to Panama and Puerto Rico.

Sweden Protests Bombing by Red Planes

France, and as a consequence the same rejection goes for shipping to other neutrals.

"If these German principles were followed, it would be necessary, as a result, to cease Swedish trade with Germany."

With feeling whipped up anew in favor of active Swedish military aid to Finland, the Russian bombing of Pajala threatened to involve the Swedish government again in a crisis which was barely forestalled by King Gustav's proclamation on Monday.

However, representatives of all political parties in Parliament voted confidence in the royally sponsored policy of nonmilitary help for Finland.

The Pajala sheriff said the Swedish government had asked him for a complete report on the incident, he declared:

"I consider it completely impossible that the attack could have been a mistake.

"The sky was clear and there was full visibility. No mistake whatever was possible.

"It was shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon and in the bright sunlight when the bombing planes appeared.

"They came in from the east at an altitude of between 4,000 and 5,000 meters (12,000 to 15,000 feet).

"The explosive bombs numbered at least 10 and there were any number of incendiary bombs dropped before the Russians wheeled away. At least four houses were burned down to the ground—gutted completely.

"No one was seriously wounded and there were no deaths, thanks to Providence, but two persons were slightly hurt.

"Needless to say, the raid took us completely by surprise, and we are at a loss to understand it.

"My government in Stockholm has commanded me to send them a full report on the incident. I shall give them very full details as I have just described them.

"I do not see how it is possible that there could have been any mistake."

Immediately after reports of the bombing reached Stockholm, the government of Premier Per Albin Hansson ordered the Swedish legation in Moscow to protest energetically.

At Pajala, a village of 1,500 inhabitants about 5 miles from the Finnish border, two storehouses were hit by incendiary explosives and burned. Two houses were also set afire and an old hospital, from which patients had just been moved to a new building, was damaged.

The school gymnasium was hit by a bomb which pierced the structure from roof to cellar without exploding. An estimated 20 additional bombs dropped near the village's largest church, which was only slightly damaged.

The incident plunged Sweden into a renewed furore over the attitude taken by the Swedish government, which announced a policy of nonmilitary aid to Finland through proclamations by King Gustaf and Premier Hansson only a few days ago.

McNutt Plans To Establish Press Office

Will Name Irwin Head, Despite Assertions He Didn't Plan a Bureau

By Alfred Friendly,
Post Staff Writer

Having rolled an appraising eye at the Federal publicity machines of other Presidential candidates, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt has decided he also wants a governmental press office.

Despite assertions when he first took office that he did not plan to have an "information office" for the FSA, McNutt has now concluded that he overlooked a good bet.

It was learned yesterday that an "over-all" division of information for the FSA will be created to "coordinate" the public announcements and press releases of the information offices in the six constituent branches of the organization.

To head the division, McNutt has lifted Jesse O. Irwin from his present position of assistant director of the Social Security Board's informational service. Irwin, formerly city editor of The Post, will assume his new duties within the week.

He will be responsible for the "administration and conduct of the several informational activities" and offices now operating independently in the SSB, Civilian Conservation Corps, National Youth Administration, Public Health Service and Office of Education.

He said he contemplated a staff of "only one or two" other people and pointed out that his civil service status was a guarantee against him or his office serving McNutt in a political office.

It is known, however, that in organizing the new division, McNutt studied the pattern of the over-all informational service in the Department of Agriculture, which heads up the work of the individual press agencies in the various bureaus and is responsible to Secretary Wallace. As the Secretary's own public relations agency, it has by no means been a political liability.

Apart from his work of the FSA, McNutt already has a personal publicity agency for his purely political activities. The office has headquarters in Washington.

There's a discord in the Army Band.

Sour notes on the subject are heard in the current issue of the Army and Navy Journal.

Warrant Officer Arthur S. Haynes, Army band leader, writes that "the band has not kept pace with the rapid development in the modernization of other branches of the Army . . . Discipline is lax, alignment faulty, and march music poor and unsuitable in many of our organizations."

Our bands are inferior to those of every other first-class power, trumpets Haynes, and lack the "swing" of European bands.

"A peppy, well-drilled up-to-the-minute band" does a lot of things for military efficiency and "provides a balm for jaded nerves," says Haynes.

are now an integral part of the German Reich and cannot, therefore, be entered by American Red Cross workers seeking to aid the stricken Poles. American representatives will be allowed in the so-called government general district about Warsaw only long enough to do the work.

The attitude of the German government in failing thus far to permit badly needed medical supplies and clothing to reach Poland, where thousands lost all their possessions, by refusal to provide adequate assurance of delivery, is matched only by the Soviet Union. The Stalin government has refused to make any concessions permitting entry of Red Cross relief supervisors.

In protracted negotiations, the German government at first attempted to claim that the Anglo-French blockade would keep American Red Cross supplies from reaching Poland, but the British control let such shipments through freely.

The concessions made by the German government were offered through diplomatic channels only after the Vatican had denounced German atrocities in Poland, and after Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, had written an open letter to President Roosevelt asking that steps be taken to induce the German government to permit American representatives to supervise expenditure of relief funds for Poland.

Sterilizations Reported

The American Red Cross has attempted to get aid to all parts of the Polish state, which the United States Government still recognizes despite the Soviet-Nazi partition. Despite lack of German guarantees regarded as adequate, the Red Cross did turn over $25,000 worth of relief supplies to the Germans in an attempt to take care of the most severely wounded Poles.

In addition to the approximately $400,000 allocated by the American Red Cross to Polish relief, it is understood this organization plans to expend $200,000 more in Poland if possible.

With American consular officials concentrated in Warsaw, it has been impossible to check impartially repeated reports of mass sterilization of Polish prisoners.

continues to present such pleasing and constructive features."

Mrs. Edith Reynolds, Arlington, Va. (mother of three children): My youngsters liked the pictures so much they clipped them from the paper and tacked them to the walls of their bedroom. I didn't approve of that—but I did approve—heartily—of The Post's new section. It was splendid."

Mrs. Samuel Barrows, 26 S street northwest: "I am a member of the P.-T. A. of three schools and therefore had a three-fold interest in The Post's presentation of 'Our Town.' It was a grand job, skillfully handled. I'm anxious to see next Sunday's section."

Dr. C. Willard Camalier, 3328 Military road northwest: "I was interested in observing the changes in teaching methods since my own children were going to school. The present setup, as shown in The Post, seems to be far more progressive."

Mrs. T. W. Stanton, 54 S street northwest: "I enjoyed the section very much. The only unfavorable reaction came from my grandson—his school wasn't mentioned. But our whole family enjoyed it—it was like going back to school."

Mrs. E. L. Mitchell, Arlington, Va.: "We always enjoy The Post. Although my youngster isn't yet old enough for school, I learned from the new section what to expect. It was fine."

Clarence Reed, of 1411 Hopkins street northwest, who said that in praising the new section he spoke for many members of Washington's colored Masonic lodge with whom he had discussed the feature: "We talked about it in our cabinet meeting, and we thoroughly enjoyed 'Our Town.' We want to congratulate you for the job. You are rendering a fine service to the citizens of the District."

Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, teacher of English and speech at the Y. W. C. A.: "I am taking this opportunity to express my appreciation of the excellent pictorial story of Washington schools which appeared in The Washington Post Sunday. The comprehensive program of the modern school, the manner in which the instruction is related to the life of the child in developing character and leading toward better citizenship, should make every father and mother grateful for what is perhaps the most priceless heritage of America—our public schools. I shall await with eagerness the next issue of 'Our Town in Pictures.'"

Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of the National University Law School and former Minister from Czecho-Slovakia to Japan: "The Washington Post's first picture section of 'Our Town' naturally held great interest and charm for me in my field of education for it gave a pictorial and verbal bird's eye view of what is going on in Washington schools—a quickly digestible way of getting educational news into the home in a painless and graphic manner."

Mrs. Bernard P. Donnelly, president of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Powell Junior High School: "As a parent I feel that it is only right that you should know how much I enjoyed and appreciated The Sunday Post articles on 'what the schools are doing for our children.' Many parents have long wondered and wanted to know just what our schools are accomplishing toward educating our children but for many reasons have never had or taken the time to see for themselves. Now if they read very carefully The Post's Sunday edition they will have the information so long looked for. I have always visited the schools and I assure you that your pictures are the very best that could be taken. They are wonderfully interesting . . . Naturally I am looking forward to next Sunday's edition with great pleasure."

Ann Sullivan Hagen, president of the Washington Chapter, Home Economics Women in Business: "This splendid section brings to mind the thought that the children of the District have the benefit of a school system that is decidedly above the average, and The Washington Post is to be congratulated for bringing this excellent pictorial section to the public."

George C. Stuart, business manager, Episcopal High School, Alexandria, Va.: "Congratulations on the splendid section, 'Our Town.' That was a real achievement. The pictures were interesting, full of human interest, but most of all, they were instructive and constructive. To the bewildered parent and especially the newcomers who are wondering just what resources and opportunities are available for the preschool and school age child in the District, the entire section was a revelation. Besides containing valuable information, the section showed careful planning and selection both in subject matter and pictorial arrangement. This section filled a real need."

Ecker Outlines Skyscraper's Cash Troubles

Empire State Building Fails to Earn Enough To Pay on Mortgage

By the Associated Press

The financial troubles of the world's tallest office building—New York's Empire State—drew the attention of the Monopoly Committee yesterday as a part of its investigation of life insurance company investments.

F. H. Ecker, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., which made a loan of $27,500,000 in 1929 to finance the construction of the building, recounted details of an interest adjustment in 1937 which avoided foreclosure under the insurance company's mortgage.

Under the original terms of the loan, Ecker testified, the building corporation was to have paid 6 per cent interest during construction, 5½ per cent thereafter until 1940, and 5 per cent from 1940 until the maturity of the loan in 1950.

Total Financing $50,000,000

At the time the loan was made, the insurance company valued the building and land at $46,000,000, Ecker said the builders had arranged for a total of $50,000,000 financing.

Failure of the building to earn sufficient rentals to pay interest, Ecker related, confronted the Metropolitan with the question of taking over the building or making an adjustment. The latter course was selected, he said, in the belief that the insurance company would be unable to obtain a greater return than the management of the building had received.

Under the arrangement, Metropolitan agreed to cancel $4,262,000 of unpaid interest on condition that the building owners pay $500,000 on principal. Interest was cut to 2 per cent for one year and is to be 2½ per cent until 1943, when it is to become 4 per cent under terms of the adjustment.

"Contribution" Is Cited

No interest can be paid to junior security holders, Ecker testified, until Metropolitan has received its interest and $7,750,000 on the principal.

Ecker told the committee that the building so far had not been able to earn the required 2½ per cent but that the amount was paid when it came due by a "contribution" in addition to the earnings.

As a result, he said, Metropolitan had realized a total of $3,800,000 more than it would have earned from the property after foreclosure.

Despite the adjustment, Ecker said, the Metropolitan's average return had been greater than on Government bonds. He added that "if in the future we have to foreclose on the property, I sincerely believe we will not have suffered any loss."

Ecker said that negotiations for the interest adjustment were carried on in part by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, president of the Empire State Building Corporation.

28 Lights Dazzle Traffic at Station

dodging through the maze of jammed automobiles.

"It will take them a little while to catch on," said Van Duzer.

While nearly a dozen policemen fought to keep traffic moving, Van Duzer, his assistant, M. O. Eldridge and Traffic Department engineers calmly viewed the situation.

Letters in Red Neon

Vehicle lights have been erected to guide traffic entering the plaza from Louisiana and Delaware avenues. Pedestrian "walk" and "don't walk" signals—flashing in red neon letters—have been placed around the entire circle.

At one point, traffic entering the plaza from Louisiana avenue on a green arrow moves about 20 yards before bumping into a red signal on the inner circle. Result: The intersection is completely blocked and doesn't clear in time for the next change in lights.

Although the red signal on the inner circle is in plain view of turning vehicles, Van Duzer said:

"They aren't supposed to pay any attention to that light—they'll catch on after a while."

Light Missing at E Street

He agreed that a "blinder" placed to prevent the turning drivers from seeing the light might help.

Motorists entering the area from Massachusetts avenue and desiring to continue around the outer circle are stopped by a light at Louisiana avenue. There is no light at E street—between the two avenues—and as a consequence, this intersection was blocked by stalled cars.

Van Duzer said a light at E street "probably would" be necessary.

On the other traffic front, Maj. Brown, in a special order to his commanding officers, called for rigid enforcement of horn-blowing and jaywalking laws after receiving numerous complaints.

"In a recent count of the blowing automobile horns at Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue," said Brown, "horns were blown at the rate of 144 an hour in the afternoon and 300 times an hour in the morning."

He said it had been reported that policemen have failed to take action when horns are sounded unnecessarily and instructed his command to "clamp down."

The horn-blowing survey was made by the American Automobile Association, Brown said. He added in his order that "pedestrians are not observing the traffic signals" and ordered officers to give the matter "special attention."

After receiving Maj. Brown's order, a policeman detailed to Union Station Plaza yesterday asked what he thought of the new system. Above the din of horns, he said:

"You couldn't print what I think!"

Jelleff's REBUILDING
UNFAIR

We are employing only union labor on our construction work
Ask the union picket why he picketsJelleff's!

Washington had a new slant on labor picketing yesterday when a downtown department store hired its own picket to picket a C. I. O. representative pacing up and down in front of the establishment picketing a construction job being done by an American Federation of Labor union

A. F. L. Pickets C. I. O. at Hat Shop; C. I. O. Pickets A. F. L. at Jelleff's; Jelleff's Pickets Picket; Pay Is Good Picket, picket, and counter-picket marched up and down F street yesterday in a single battle involving two stores, two unions, but no complaints by the men at work.

The American Federation of Labor Painters Union picketed the Knickerbocker Hat Shop, 1228 F street northwest, where a paint job, now complete, was done by Congress of Industrial Organizations affiliates. The C. I. O. retaliated with a picket in front of Jelleff's, 1214 F street, where construction work is being done by A. F. of L. workers.

Jelleff's struck back with a picket of their own, bearing the sign, "Unfair to Jelleff's. We are employing only union labor on our construction work. Ask the picket why he pickets Jelleff's!"

J. W. Brown, business agent of the A. F. of L. local, said he would keep his pickets in front of the hat store till the paint job was done all over again by A. F. of L. workers. Herman Schimel, store manager, said he didn't think his New York office would permit the expense.

Frank R. Jelleff, owner of the department store, signed a newspaper statement saying: "What profits it for a decent citizen to rebuild in these days, paying union wages, only to be picketed because of a union quarrel?"

Net profit to the pickets was 60 cents an hour for the C. I. O. man; 60 cents an hour for Jelleff's man, and $1.58 an hour for the A. F. of L. man.

Kennedy to Return To London Saturday

Boston, Feb. 21 (AP).—Shortly before leaving Boston, en route by his own testimony, to conclude his public life as American Ambassador to Great Britain, Joseph P. Kennedy said today his health had just been "Ok'd" by Lahey Clinic.

Kennedy came to Boston for a checkup. He said he would sail aboard the liner Manhattan Saturday, returning to London by way of Genoa.

Washington Descendant Urges Unity

Farewell Address Is Called Bulwark For U. S. Liberties

By W. Selden Washington.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 21 (DS).—I celebrate George Washington's 208th birthday today, not to honor a forebear, but to join with all liberty-loving Americans in paying tribute to the man who helped found that democratic unity which has made America unique among the nations of the world.

For in no other country have so many diverse groups been able to work and prosper side by side, each contributing the distinctive benefits of their national and religious background to blend the unity which Washington first gave us and so strongly bade us perpetuate.

And at no other time in our history, I think, do Washington's basic principles need greater emphasis than at present—when Europe and Asia are ravaged by war and America assailed by totalitarian bigots who would destroy it if they could.

A Nation United

When our country was founded, Washington worked for no mere federation of States but a Nation united in a common spiritual need, in common ideals, common desires for personal liberty and national independence.

Washington helped weld a new Nation out of 13 straggling colonies and a score of diverse peoples—not through regimentation and fear, not through an artificial unity based on false notions of "racial" superiority or religious bigotry—but out of common love for democracy and liberty, and the mutual acceptance by all citizens of their neighbors as decent, self-respecting human beings.

"With slight shades of difference," Washington said in what I think is one of his greatest orations, "You have the same religion, manners, habits and political principles. You have a common cause fought and triumphed together. The independence and liberty you possess are the work of joint councils, and joint efforts—of common dangers, sufferings and successes."

"Main Prop of Liberty"

"Your Union," the first President stated in his Farewell Address, "ought to be considered as a main prop of your liberty . . . Love of the one ought to endear you to preservation of the other."

No one was more keenly aware than Washington of history's most often demonstrated truth: That where the liberties of any one group in the Nation are violated and its right to existence is menaced, the rights of all others are gradually infringed upon and ultimately destroyed.

Artful and unscrupulous cliques, he warned—anticipating by a century and a half the Communist "cells" and the bigoted "shirt" and "front" movements so recently exposed—"are likely in the course of time and things, to become potent engines, by which cunning, ambitious and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people and to usurp for themselves the reins of government, destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion."

"Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence I conjure you to believe me, fellow citizens, the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake," he said.

In seeking the means of maintaining our internal and international peace, I think we need look no farther than to these basic principles laid down long ago by the Father of our Country.

So long as George Washington's conception of democratic unity is retained, the foreign-inspired hatemongers and native would-be fuehrers or commissars will never take over America.

So long as this unity is preserved, public revulsion will thwart, and outraged decency will defeat, the disrupters who exploit prejudice and ignorance, who set class against class and one religious group against another for their own ends.

Capital Joins Nation in Tribute to Washington

Former Gov. Harry Nice of Maryland will speak at the dinner of Alexandria and Virginia Masons beginning at 6:30 p. m., Portner's Civic Center, Alexandria. The Veterans of Foreign Wars will give a banquet at 7 p. m. in the George Mason Hotel.

Many guests from both dinners will attend the annual Washington Birthnight Ball, sponsored by Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion. The dance begins at Gadsby's Tavern at 10 p. m.

In Washington, at 10 p. m., nearly 1,000 couples are expected to gather at the Mayflower for the dance sponsored by the District department of the legion. Diplomatic representatives from all nations which have ever been allies of the United States have been invited.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, will speak at a meeting of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants in the Old Union Engine House, Nineteenth and H streets northwest, at 10:30 a. m. Jesse C. Suter will read the Farewell Address.

The Washington Monument Society, which conducted a 60-year campaign for erection of the shaft on the Mall, will hold its 107th annual meeting at the Metropolitan Club at 12:30 p. m.

Sons of the American Revolution will meet at 1 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel to nominate new officers and hear a talk by Wade H. Ellis on Washington's life.

At 4 p. m. a delegation from the Rainbow Division Veterans will meet at the memorial tree to Maj. William Hudson, which is located at Sixteenth and Madison streets northwest. Maj. Hudson, who served with the 165th (District of Columbia) Field Hospital, was killed in action in France.

The Grand Chapter of the District of Columbia, Order of the Eastern Star, will give a "silver tea" from 4 to 7 p. m. at its clubhouse, 2600 Sixteenth street northwest. The hostesses, each a matron of one of the 40 chapters here, will wear colonial costume.

Washington Invented Scooter To Speed Up Wine Serving

George Washington, the indefatigable Patent Office researchers revealed yesterday, was something of an inventor himself, specializing in a sort of a table scooter to enable swift and easy circulation of wine decanters.

In Patent Office records, it was reported, is a letter from the first President to his secretary, bitterly complaining about the high cost of his furnishings for his Philadelphia residence, most of which he had commissioned Gov. Morris to buy in Paris.

He also mentioned that some of the wine coolers sent by Morris could be improved on, and ordered the construction of some coasters, with four apertures for different kinds of liquors, each aperture just sufficient to hold one of the cut decanters sent by Mr. Morris.

Would these not be more convenient, he asked, "than the handling of each bottle separately, by which it often happens that when one bottle moves another stops, and all are in confusion?"

Washington asked his secretary to have two of the castors made, with an upright handle in the middle. He figured the four bottles would weigh 4 pounds, the wine in them 8 pounds more. This, plus the weight of the coolers, "will, I fear, make the latter too unwieldy to pass, especially by ladies," hence the suggestion for the castors, which could be rolled from one end of the table to the other.

Washington used the two silver frames at his first dinner in honor of Government officials, and the idea was quickly adopted by fashionable Philadelphia families, who, for the next 25 years, left the coolers on the sideboard and passed the wine at table in its own special rolling stock.

REV. O'CONNOR

Speeches by Dr. Abernethy, Dr. O'Connor And Rabbi Gerstenfeld to Be Made Over Radio on Freedom of Religion

Today, as the Nation celebrates the anniversary of the Father of Our Country, leaders of three faiths in Washington will meet in a broadcasting studio to demonstrate that a principle dear to the hearts of America's founders lives on—the principle of freedom of religion.

"The Religion of the Founders" is the subject on which these leaders will speak and their talks will be carried over Stations WMAL and WRC from 12:45 p. m. to 1:15 p. m.

This holiday religious broadcast is another in the series arranged by the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, an interfaith group organized to encourage men and women of all religions to be more active in their own churches and thus promote the ideals that all faiths have in common.

Speakers today will be the Rev. Dr. Patrick J. O'Connor, of Catholic University, who will represent the Catholic faith; the Rev. William S. Abernethy, D. D., pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, who will speak for the Protestant denominations, and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, who is the representative for the Jewish groups.

The Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney, D. D., minister of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, who is chairman of the committee on religious life, will preside during the program.

Members of the Calvary Baptist Church choir, under the direction of Herbert V. Pate, will furnish music for the program. Numbers include "The Land of Hope and Glory," by Elgar, and "America Triumphant," by Demarest. The broadcast will conclude with the singing of "America."

The broadcast was arranged with the cooperation of the National Broadcasting Company which is donating the time for the program.

Chairman Kennedy Calls Executive Session On Plan for Tuesday

Promising to expedite Congressional consideration of the year-old District reorganization issue, Chairman Kennedy yesterday called an executive meeting of the House subcommittee which must first pass upon the legislation for 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Following a conference with Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, Kennedy said he would introduce the Seal reform plan so that it may be taken up by the subcommittee along with his own measure.

Public hearings will be held, starting probably the latter part of next week, Kennedy said, but an effort will be made to restrict the testimony so as not to cover the same ground gone over last year.

Local suffrage is expected to be the major issue before the subcommittee because of Kennedy's intention of offering an amendment to set up an elective city council on his own bill.

Last year the subcommittee refused to hear any testimony on suffrage holding that it was a separate issue that should rise or fall on its own merits without regard to reorganization of the administrative functions of the District government.

Tuesday's meeting will be attended by the Commissioners, Seal, and other District officials, Kennedy said. An attempt will be made to agree on a procedure for the hearings at that time.

Not wishing to become involved in long drawn out hearings such as were held last year, Kennedy said:

"I want this question settled one way or the other as quickly as possible."

The issues are clearly drawn, he pointed out, and there is little need for extensive hearings. Unless the legislation is presented to the House within a few weeks, he added, it will be in danger of being caught in the adjournment rush as it was in 1939.

Senators Hear Dr. Hornbeck On the Far East

Foreign Relations Subcommittee Begins Neutrality Hearings

By the United Press

Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee again shied away from the explosive Japanese embargo issue yesterday while a subcommittee opened hearings on the Gillette resolution to invoke the Neutrality Act in the Sino-Japanese War.

Chairman Pittman of the full committee, said the embargo bills were still the first order of business, but he would not guess when they would be acted upon. The subcommittee meanwhile heard testimony on "certain aspects" of Japanese-American relations from Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief of the State Department's Far Eastern division, and his assistant, John Hamilton.

Members of the subcommittee were secretive about what Hornbeck said. He was called in connection with Senator Guy M. Gillette's resolution. Gillette was as uncommunicative as his colleagues, although it was learned that he testified in defense of his measure.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, subcommittee chairman, said that Dr. Hornbeck added nothing new to the State Department's already declared opposition to the Neutrality Act proposal. He said the resolution would be taken up with the full committee at its regular meeting next Wednesday.

Secretary Hull recently urged Congress to withhold action on the neutrality measure. He stated that he was abreast of developments in the Orient and urged that the department not be hampered.

All of the measures are aimed at penalizing Japan for suppression of American rights in conquered areas of China, as was termination of the trade treaty. Japan currently is settling some American claims and otherwise attempting to mollify American anger.

Order of Moose Names Neeley Supreme Prelate

Senator Neeley, of West Virginia, yesterday was named supreme prelate of the Loyal Order of Moose at a meeting of the supreme council in the Mayflower Hotel.

Senator James A. Davis, of Pennsylvania, chairman of yesterday's meeting, said Joseph F. O'Connell, of Boston, a former member of Congress, was elected chief justice of the organization's supreme forum.

Sessions yesterday were devoted to plans for coming summer conventions in Des Moines, Iowa, and Mooseheart, Ind. The conventions are scheduled for June and July and will be attended by delegates from this country, Great Britain, Canada and "as many countries as the present war permits."

Tony Lujan Forsakes Repartee With Mabel Dodge for Farm

Indian Husband of Author Striving To Recreate Her Famous New York Salon Of Pre-War Days Is on the Way Home

Tony Lujan, mighty of girth and sparing of speech, is going home to his farm in Taos, N. M., undismayed at the thought of leaving behind the repartee-filled salon which his famous memoir-writing wife, Mabel Dodge Luhan, is striving to recreate in New York.

Tony, who is stopping off in Washington on his return trip, has been in New York for two weeks and has no comment to make except that the weather was bad.

Tony's face, framed with two braids of string-wrapped black hair, is the perfect image of that on the Buffalo nickel. And it was just as inanimate when he was asked about his wealthy wife and the famous men and women of arts and letters—radical John Reed the pious Louis Untermeyer, William Rose and Stephen Vincent Benet and her former painter-husband, Maurice Sterne—who gathered at Mabel Dodge's feet in prewar New York.

He Doesn't See Them

"I don't see 'em much," he said.

The strong face, serene in repose, breaks quickly into smiles, and his left hand, with the magnificent torquoise and coin-silver ring, gestulates eagerly, however, when the conversation turns to his farm in Taos, his fine stand of alfalfa and the tractor "that I sit on myself."

He nods approval, too, at the mention of his old and good friend, John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, whom he will see while he is here and tell of the drought-intensified hard times among the Taos Indians.

Even they, Tony revealed, have suffered from machine displacement. Once they supplied wood and labored in other ways for their "good friends" the artists and writers who retreat to the rustic New Mexico art center. Now, says Tony, with impressive brevity, "the trucks haul."

Asked to pose for a picture with an Indian Office pamphlet in his hotel room, Tony clamped his jaw.

To Listen In On Congress

"It is not right. I do not read—or I read in my mind—what I think."

He can listen, though, and intends to hear the Congress in session.

"I think I try to find out," he smiles at the thought, "just what those Senators and Congressmen are trying to do."

Asked again about his wife, who wrote four volumes of "Intimate Memories" and other books, he explains only that she spells her name with an "h" because her friends were prone to mispronounce "Lujan" as the name is properly spelled.

And asked again about what he thinks of those famous friends, Tony's lips suddenly dropped down.

"I can't tell you that," he says, but he has already told.

Tony's superb horses are mentioned and the smile reappears.

Centripetal Force

Two events yesterday indicate the extreme difficulty of isolating the Russo-Finnish conflict, and the tendency of hostilities between those two countries to merge in the larger war.

The first of these occurrences was the bombing, presumably accidental, of a Swedish frontier village by Russian planes. The other was the authoritative report that the British government is now materially augmenting its dispatch of military supplies to Finland. Included in the equipment which the British are sending to Finland are said to be substantial numbers of the most modern type of combat planes.

The Russian bombing of the Swedish village of Pajola is certain to increase the powerful sentiment in that country which demands more direct military assistance to the hard-pressed Finns. Already the issue has reached the stage where overthrow of the Swedish government is threatened as a result of its neutrality policy.

While the Swedes are naturally indignant over the Pajola incident, the Russian government will doubtless be as strongly resentful of the scale on which the British are now intervening in behalf of Finland. The Soviet government has amply demonstrated that it proposes to conquer Finland regardless of cost. It is to be presumed that those who support the Finns will be regarded in Moscow as active enemies of the Communist dictatorship.

Together with these ominous developments in Scandinavia must be coupled the increasing preparations of the Turkish government for war. The evidence accumulates that the European conflict is not likely to remain isolated between Germany on the one hand and the Franco-British alliance on the other. The centripetal force of the ruthless fighting between these major belligerents is steadily operating to draw the remainder of the continent into a second world war.

Dunce Cap Won't Fit

While President Roosevelt is on the high seas the effort to "smoke him out" on the question of a third term continues. Several leaders of the President's own party have now taken charge of a movement which was at first confined to professionally alert correspondents.

It was easy for the President to chide representatives of the press for their persistent efforts to secure a statement on his 1940 intentions. Reporters can always be told to go stand in the corner or put on a dunce cap. But no such reprimand is applicable to Senator Edwin C. Johnson's charge that the President's continued silence is demoralizing and disrupting the Democratic Party.

The Colorado Senator is only one of several who, in the last few days, have given vent to their annoyance over the President's noncommittal attitude. Senator Burke joined Senator Johnson in emphasizing that the Democratic nomination will be worthless to anyone other than the President if his silence continues. They fear that avowed candidates will have inadequate opportunity to present their cases before the public unless the third-term question mark is speedily eliminated.

These Senators share a widespread belief that the President does not want to run. Unless Mr. Roosevelt soon takes himself out of the race, however, that belief will no longer be tenable. The season of State primaries is at hand. If the President intends to be a candidate without letting his intention be known he can protect his interests in some States only by permitting "favorite sons" to serve as proxies. But that would involve a "manipulation of delegates," which, as Senator Johnson has pointed out, is "far beneath the dignity" of any President.

Senator Donahey has bluntly refused to serve as a "stalking horse" for the President in Ohio. His courageous stand is entirely in line with the best practices of representative government. If democracy is to mean anything, the rank and file should have a dominant voice in the selection of party candidates as well as in the final election. The naming of dummy candidates, with the intention of shifting their strength to Mr. Roosevelt in the Democratic National Convention, would be considered foul play by other Democratic aspirants. Incidentally, such a travesty upon representative government would provide a somber background for a third-term campaign.

Bricks Without Straw

The Congressional investigation of Washington's public welfare institutions has resulted in an order to Health Officer Ruhland to "go ahead and work something out." Chairman D'Alesandro of the investigating committee appears to have passed the buck to the District Commissioners. And they in turn have passed it on to Dr. Ruhland and Robert E. Bondy, director of public welfare.

For years the Board of Public Welfare has sought funds to improve conditions at the Home for the Aged and Infirm, the Children's Receiving Home and other institutions under its supervision. The Health Department has repeatedly asked for money to wage a more effective fight against contagion. Only a small fraction of the sums requested have been granted. Yet these agencies are now told to alleviate the deplorable conditions that have been brought to light, without waiting for Congress to appropriate money for additional equipment and personnel.

Dr. Ruhland was fully justified in replying to Commissioner Allen: "But aren't you asking me to make bricks without straw?" It is possible that some of the shocking conditions at Blue Plains can be temporarily relieved by what Mr. Bondy calls "patchwork." But under present conditions a patch applied to one part of our inadequate public welfare system may mean a new weakness at some other point. "Second-hand institutions," as Mr. Bondy says, "cannot be patched forever."

In suddenly demanding that the Commissioners institute corrective measures at Blue Plains and the Receiving Home, Representative D'Alesandro probably realized the inability of his investigating committee to cope with the problem. He has thrown the responsibility for a clean-up where that responsibility ought to be lodged. The bitter irony of the situation is that neither the Commissioners nor other officials of the local government have the authority to effect the reforms that are so desperately needed.

If Congress would permit the District to manage its own municipal affairs, under a charter carefully prescribing its powers, an investigation of this sort would put the Commissioners on the spot. At present, however, disgraceful conditions revealed by the D'Alesandro committee are a slap in the face for Congress. For Congress holds the District's purse strings and denies the local authorities power to bring about improvements, or even to recommend them directly to the House or Senate.

The current investigation of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board illustrates how difficult it is for any local agency to function independently in the public interest. Apparently this inquiry was undertaken largely to coerce the board into reversing its judgment in specific cases. In these circumstances no one should be surprised to hear a former attorney for the board testify that the ABCB handles liquor licenses by "rule of fear rather than by any other method."

So long as the District has no government that can in any sense be called its own, specific reforms undertaken here or there will necessarily be patchwork. The real question is not whether a full-time doctor and more waiters shall be sent to Blue Plains, but whether legislators like Mr. D'Alesandro will have the courage to follow their proposed reforms in the Nation's Capital to a logical conclusion.

The Use Of The Mails

When Thomas E. Dewey protested against the franking of Government "propaganda" through the mails last week he overlooked a very constructive step that has been taken to limit use of the mails for this purpose. An amendment to the Treasury-Postoffice appropriations bill enacted last year forbids executive departments and independent establishments to send out reports, bulletins and documents (with certain exceptions) unless they have been requested by the person to whom they are sent.

That provision, sponsored by Senator O'Mahoney, became effective last July 1. According to Postoffice spokesmen, it has resulted in a sharp decline in the free mail sent out by governmental agencies. On the basis of experience over three months it is estimated that mail of this character will amount to 67,000,000 pounds during the current fiscal year as compared with 90,000,000 pounds for the previous 12 months. That would mean a saving of at least $8,000,000 this year.

Of course, this amendment has no direct effect upon the content of governmental reports and pamphlets. But it has forbidden the costly dissemination of unsolicited governmental data. And by requiring each agency to report its volume of franked mail, Congress has made officials more conscious of a check on the material which they send out. These are substantial achievements. If the O'Mahoney amendment is properly enforced, it will be a salutary curb on governmental publicity.

By coincidence Mr. Dewey chose the home town of Senator O'Mahoney—Cheyenne—to deliver his attack upon Federal propaganda. It was therefore the more unfortunate that he failed to give the Senator due credit for this first step toward a solution of the problem.

End Of The Road

The defeat of Gov. Earl W. Long in Louisiana's run-off primary election marks the penultimate stage in the disintegration of what, in its time, was the most thoroughgoing political dictatorship ever established in any State of the Union.

The regime which Huey Long had established in Louisiana was sufficiently powerful to survive the death of the dictator on September 10, 1935. It managed to survive, though in weakened form, the relentless exposure by the Federal authorities during the past year of a long and noisome trail of graft and corruption directly implicating some of the late Kingfish's principal lieutenants. But it can hardly survive the blow struck against it on Tuesday. The sovereign voters of Louisiana appear at long last to have reclaimed the State for democracy.

As long as the old machine remained undefeated at the polls, there was always the possibility that it might regain the once absolute control it had exercised over Louisiana politics. Seymour Weiss, Dr. James Monroe Smith, former Gov. Richard W. Leche and other lieutenants of the Huey Long machine had fallen afoul of the law, indictments in some instances having already been followed by conviction and imprisonment. But the disappearance of these men from the political scene appeared, for a time, only to clear the way for the domination of the State by Robert S. Maestri, mayor of New Orleans and a member of Huey Long's inner circle. And Earl Long has been Maestri's man, supported by the latter in the bid for another term as Governor of Louisiana.

It was at this point that the voters of Louisiana stepped in to ditch the Long machine. In the primary election Earl Long received a substantial vote, but not the necessary majority over all the other candidates.

His chances in the run-off were, however, good. He was in office, with all the advantages of having charge of the machinery of government in a State where the technique of manipulating elections has been developed to a high art. He had the support of the dominant political machine in the Louisiana metropolis. Last but not least there was a possibility that the minor opposition candidates would fail to throw their support to Sam Jones, Long's rival in the run-off primary.

The vote indicates that the latter development did not occur. Such primary rivals as State Senator James A. Noe did yeoman service for Jones. Moreover, the presence in Louisiana of O. James Rogge, Assistant Attorney General, who had promised full investigation of all charges of voting irregularities, indirectly helped the forces of reform.

But the principal credit for the dramatic overturn in Louisiana belongs to the voters themselves. Four years after the death of the dictator they were given a dramatic opportunity to express their views as to how they are to be governed. They appear to have made use of that opportunity in gratifying fashion. Not merely Mr. Jones but also the entire anti-machine slate was approved in the primary balloting. The Long regime now passes into history.

White Wings

The impression left by New York street cleaners on visitors to the metropolis in the old days was that they were happy-go-lucky souls given to making as much noise and stirring up as much dust as they could. But that was before the advent of Fiorella LaGuardia and his streamlined government.

Today, if the tests made public by the New York Municipal Civil Service Commission for jobs in the Sanitation Department are any guide, a Gotham street cleaner must be a cross between a circus strong man and an Olympic athlete. He must combine the best qualities of Sandow, Glenn Cunningham and the late Pat McGrath.

"A candidate," says one part of the strength test, "must lift from the ground an ordinary sweeper's can, weighted to 120 pounds gross, and deposit it gently on a ledge 4 feet 6 inches high." But that's only the beginning. The candidate must similarly prove that he is able to lift from the floor and straight overhead "dumbbells in each hand weighing from 50 to 60 pounds." He must also be able to run, hurdle, climb fences and be an expert in obstacle races. And, of course, he must pass a written test proving that he has a sound mind as well as a supersound body.

Records show that no fewer than 87,000 candidates have filed applications for the available sanitation jobs. Thus only a small proportion of those who pass can immediately receive employment. But the others should not long remain in the ranks of the unemployed. If they can't become street cleaners they may try out for Tarzan roles in the movies, or as ushers in Mr. Whalen's second World of Tomorrow.

Letters To The Editor

"Our Town In Pictures"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This comes to thank and compliment The Post upon the recently projected and launched feature, "Our Town in Pictures," the first devoted largely to public education in the District of Columbia.

We are all indebted to you for visualizing to John Q. Citizen the character and great extent of public education here to the end that being better acquainted he will lend his assistance to the solution of problems confronting the system from time to time.

The public schools are happy to have the splendid cooperation from the press of Washington and this recent project of The Post only tends to emphasize the fine spirit of vying, one with the other, for the community good.

"Housing In Danger"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Members of the Virginia Real Estate Association have directed my attention to your editorial headed "Housing in Danger" in The Post for February 20.

This association is on record as being opposed to subsidized housing under the USHA plan or any other plan that includes the hidden subsidy principle, and it has been suggested we advise our reasons for such opposition.

You may recall the USHA was originally publicized as a "slum-clearance" agency, although at this writing nearly one-half of its projects are located in outlying areas, leaving the slums in many cities to continue in existence as the abode of our lowest-income groups.

The low-rent feature of the USHA projects now seems to be receiving the attention of the USHA publicists. It is true that the USHA is able to offer rentals at about one-half the economic rent. That is to say, about one-half the economic rent that should be charged on the basis of cost to the Housing Authority.

This reduction is brought about by the elimination of two costs usual in private financing: 1. No taxes. 2. Use of Federal subsidies to pay both the principal and interest on USHA housing loans.

Despite these admitted advantages, the USHA is still unable to provide housing for our lowest-income group and it is this group, able to pay little or no rent, that is at the mercy of the private owner and whose shelter is dependent upon the landlord's charity.

We feel you should be able to appreciate and understand the unrest and reaction that is bound to follow when our unfortunates fully realize that their more fortunate brothers are living in Government subsidized housing projects while they, the people who really need assistance, are forced to continue to exist in slums.

The solution of the slum or housing problem facing the Nation is not to be found in subsidies. Slums are the result of an economic condition and will be remedied only through correction of conditions that have placed many of us in dire circumstances and with funds hardly sufficient to purchase food and clothing.

The correction of our economic existence to the point where there is work for every man at a living wage will solve the housing problem, for it is a lack of funds with which to provide a decent standard of living that is responsible for our slums. OTTO HOLLOWELL,
Executive Secretary, Virginia Real Estate Association.
Norfolk, Feb. 20.

To Constant Reader

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Constant Reader seemed so distressed in his letter printed on the 12th (after selling stocks "short") that I feel the urge to do my good deed today by trying to palliate his insomnia a little, perhaps streamline his methods.

His style cramped by the SEC, but his elan heightened by the elimination of the "Morgans" under the New Deal, he has plunged where the declines pointed. For no good reason at all the lines became buoyant and the funds, which were to buy a birthday gift for the girl friend, vanish.

I'm not going to preach to him by pointing out that his need to pinch lunch money and cigarettes to make up for short selling proves that he should not be in the market. Incidentally, the admirable understanding and patience he so cherishes in the girl friend may be too obvious to be permanent.

I'm not going to do any moralizing whatever. Without any theories born of experience in economic and financial research, I wish merely to record an observation in practical profit frenzy. It works 100 per cent.

I know a young fellow who studies the racing sheets each day and picks a list of preferred horses. He does not put up any money, mind you, but jots down on his chart certain amounts for winners and place. The next day, studying the results, he tells me how much he "won," or how much he "would have lost." He credits himself with what he "wins." But does he debit himself bad guesses?

This young man is a clever philosopher; he reasons that since he did not lay any legal tender he is also ahead where he "would have lost." So he credits himself with that too, and at the end of the week his account is not bad at all—and he sleeps like a kitten.

In other words the whole truth should be exposed to the young lady, and Constant Reader will probably be unencumbered when it's time for an Easter present.

Youth Congress Reaction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This writer was very agreeably surprised to note the change in attitude of the Administration toward American Youth Congress as indicated by speeches of, first, Attorney General Jackson and then by President Roosevelt. I feel sure that the majority of the citizens of this country will approve the outspoken advice given in both instances since there has been a belief that the Administration was coddling this group, more or less, in some of its radical tendencies.

I happened to tune in on the proceedings the night Edward Strong, who claimed to represent the Negro youth of the South, spoke his piece, just before Mr. Jackson made his speech, and I think that the Attorney General should be commended for the manner in which he avoided any but a simple reference to one of the most undignified and uncalled for diatribes it has ever been my lot to listen to.

I feel quite sure that Edward Strong does not represent the Negro youth of my section of the country (or any other section for that matter) but, instead, is a would-be tool of the radical un-American element in this country.

Poll Taxes In The States

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On February 13, in your editorial "Poll Taxes," you attempted logically to defend the thesis that the "privilege of voting is not among the inalienable rights" granted under the Constitution to free-born Americans.

It is generally known that poll taxes and some other restrictions are definitely imposed to prevent Negroes and poor whites from voting. Even though discrimination could be proved, you doubt that the Federal Government could force reforms except by reduction of the States' representation in Congress. Fortunately, the editorial admits that the purposes for which poll taxes are levied, and the method of enforcing these laws, violate the principles of equality upon which democracy is based, and you suggest "forthright repeal" by the States.

All nonfascistic and noncommunist minded citizens hope that the Southern States will heed this admonition. Virginia is earnestly attempting to democratize its Commonwealth that for so long has been ruled by closed cliques.

Only a few of the potential voters go to the polls. In Fairfax County only about 2,800 persons voted in the last general election out of a population of 35,000 of which 18,000 are adults. Only 234,980 people voted in the entire State of Virginia.

Were Congress to exercise its duty and diminish the representation of Virginia, this State would approximate about one-half of the representation given West Virginia and Maryland, one-tenth of that to Pennsylvania and one-fourteenth of that of New York.

In this decade of unemployment and support of the poor by dole or relief money, obviously only the better off, or those whose votes can be persuaded, have a chance to vote. When it is recalled that in Virginia a poor person who has not paid a poll tax for a lapse of years must pay $5.08, which includes interest, and must pay six months to the day before the election date, the cause for disfranchisement of citizens is seen.

The poll tax in some States is used for school purposes. Here again, the poor and the Negro minority in some States are greatly discriminated against in educational opportunity, largely because the voters, the privileged class, control the distribution of educational and living opportunities.

The differential in some States for education of privileged and non-privileged shows that in one county a project for improving schools for one group amounted to nearly $400,000 while the underprivileged with greater needs were to receive less than $10,000, although the underprivileged population was at least one-fifth of that of the entire county. Generally in the South, the Negro school child receives an education that costs about one-fifth of that of the group that pays the poll tax and controls elections.

Of course, all of the other civic improvements are denied those sections where poor whites and Negroes live and from whence come few votes, because of the economic status of these people.

In Virginia the battle is on, but the vested interests, through entrenched voting power, will fight democracy to the last ditch. Your editorials should help the campaign for free elections.

Horror Pictures

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: American ardor for the Finnish cause has been falling of late, because of those horror pictures of frozen Russians and the stories of multitudes of helpless men slaughtered by invisible and invincible Finns. The natural reaction has been, "Ah, those poor Russians!"

Do tell whoever's in charge to give us a picture now and then of a Finn with chilblains or a story of a Russian able to blow his own nose, and our ardor will rekindle.

The Post Impressionist

Warm Up The Chump

When I really got to know Bolo I used to tell Peggy about him and say:

"Bolo's the only reason I know why I'd like to try to write a book. I'd like to call it 'Bums I Have Known.'"

"How much did you let him have?" she asked.

"Two bucks this time."

"Two bucks," she said, "two bucks. You ought to call your book 'Bums Who Have Known You.' It fits Bolo better and besides is not so presumptive."

Bolo was another one of those broken down mile posts along the road of modern journalism. He was a floater. A floating copy reader. There used to be one on every newspaper.

He'd be down in Miami in the winter and up in Boston in the summer. During a scorcher, he once drifted up to Maine and he got a desk job too.

As copy readers go, Bolo didn't go very far. He could spell and when you needed him to fill in for one of the boys who was sick, or somebody who had a terrible hangover, you could always get him. But beyond those two virtues there wasn't much you could say about Bolo.

He was a funny-looking little fellow—one of those fellows who divorced his pants from his vest long, long ago. Consequently, they never met.

He thought he was a great fiction writer. You can't blame Bolo for that. He certainly looked at a lot of bad fiction that passed for fact on some of those papers he used for vacations.

One time Bolo wrote what he thought was a lulu for a great magazine. He made the mistake of giving the newspaper as his return address. You also can't blame him for that. I think he was sleeping in the parks.

Anyhow, the story came back.

There was a big, rough Irishman on the desk at that time—a big guy with a cuspidor sense of humor. He opened Bolo's letter, took out the rejection slip and scribbled across the bottom:

"This is not only a bad story: It is badly written, badly constructed and badly conceived. It's the worst story I have ever read. Please favor us by sending us nothing more."

This Irish fellow sealed up the letter and put it back in Pete's box where Bolo got his mail. Bolo was awful to see when he read that faked rejection slip. But he was game. He sat down and wrote the editor of this great magazine a piece of superb invective covering everything from the editor's English clothes to his wife's canary.

The editor of the great magazine was game too. He turned Bolo's letter over to the legal department, and what the legal department wrote Bolo turned him white. Then the dawn broke for Bolo. He turned the matter over to someone he knew in the Postoffice Department and this someone scared the life out of the Irishman by threatening to throw him into clink for tampering with Bolo's mail.

But that little interlude isn't what I remember most about Bolo.

After the advent of the school of journalism, when city editors became convinced that its graduates had some other accomplishments besides the touch system on the typewriter, shorthand and the sincere belief that a newspaperman didn't have to mix alcohol with his blood to better make the ink flow, Bolo stopped floating and somehow landed his unique job. He had a permanent job as a substitute copy reader, if you know what I mean.

The boss said he couldn't give him a regular job, but he could fill in as long as he wanted to. Bolo had lost none of his old cunning. He could still spell and he'd always show up when somebody was sick or had a terrible hangover. So he clinched this permanent job as a substitute copy reader.

He regularly got about two nights' work a week, which was all Bolo needed for his simple needs. Any work beyond that was gravy. And that brings me to my point.

When we used to wake up with a touch of the flu or a too graphic memory of Saturday night, it became our unpleasant duty to call Pete and tell him to get somebody to sit in for us. That wasn't so bad. The tough part was going through all the stuff about getting somebody to sit in for us, how we'd pay the guy ourself, how much we'd pay him, and so on. But Bolo saved us. After he got his permanent job as a substitute we always went through the same routine. We'd call the desk and ask for Pete.

"Pete," we'd say, "this is so and so."

"Yep," Pete would say.

"Pete," we'd say, "warm up the chump."

"O. K." Pete would say, and he knew exactly what we meant and what we meant him to do. He'd pick up the phone and call Bolo.

"Warm up," Pete would say to Bolo, "we need you to sit in tonight."

It sure did save a lot of talk.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

AFTER A LEGAL struggle lasting three months Willie Bioff, the fugitive Chicago vicemonger and labor racketeer, has turned up in his old home town to finish a sentence of six months for pandering in 1922. Bioff claims to have rehabilitated himself in the service of labor, with a capital L, and poses as a martyr, done in by "the moneyed interests and Communists," which is a new combination. It is further contended on his behalf that he was but a boy of 21 when he was convicted.

The facts disagree with Bioff. He was arrested in Chicago as late as 1932, at which time he was a member of the Capone mob; and his reference from the Chicago police department as of November, 1939, said, "he is a thoroughly vicious hoodlum and has always been with gangsters." His associates are vicemongers and gamblers. His career in the union racket was very profitable, for he is a wealthy country gentleman, with an estate near Los Angeles, and in the winter of 1938 he sailed aboard the liner Normandie in accommodations for two which cost $2,700. And when he was arrested in 1922 he gave his age as 24, not 21.

Bioff never was elected to any position in the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Operators, which he represented in California, but was appointed to the position of personal representative of George Browne, the union president, after a fight between racketeers for control of this promising organization. Browne has not repudiated him, and, indeed, has not offered a word of comment for publication on the affairs of his union since the lid blew off.

Since then—in fact, only last week—Mr. Edwin Lahey, an authority on labor unions, writing in the Chicago Daily News, has offered some interesting background on another "personal representative" of Mr. Browne—to "wit, Nicolo Circella, alias Nick Dean, a Chicago hoodlum, stickup man and restaurateur. In the primitive days of the movies they were known as nickelodeons or nickelodeons, and that appears to tell us how Circella came to be known as Nicolo Dean and Nick Dean. Dean's night club in Chicago is described by Mr. Lahey as a resort of cafe society, and is billed as "the aristocrat of restaurants."

"The recorded history of Nick Dean begins in 1915 when he was a callow youth of 20," Mr. Lahey reports. "In December of that year he pleaded guilty of robbery, and was placed on probation for a year. He was a busy little bee during that period of probation, sticking up joints all around town."

Mr. Lahey lists four stickups in a brief period. In the fourth venture one of Nick's comrades shot a man twice, and Circella went to Pontiac Reformatory on charges of assault to commit murder and assault to rob. Other charges were waived, with leave to reinstate. He was in Pontiac from September 21, 1916, until January 1, 1919, when he was paroled, only to be returned on May 21, 1920.

During this parole period, Mr. Lahey says, the distinguished labor leader was in trouble on four charges of larceny and one of burglary, but was not convicted, and in 1922 he was indicted for the robbery of a bank messenger. Other defendants were convicted, but Circella's indictment was quashed.

"In 1924," says Mr. Lahey, "Circella was arrested and was identified by William Russell, a postal messenger, as one of the members of the Fontana gang who had beaten him and escaped with $150,000 in currency. The disposition of this case does not appear in the records."

"No disposition," incidentally, is a routine entry in the Chicago police and court records. Why cases are not disposed of nobody apparently ever troubles to inquire. Bioff's pandering case was a "no disposition" job until it was discovered that he still owed time.

Bioff and Circella, or Dean, entered the I. A. T. S. E. or Stagehands and Movie Studio Workers' Union, about the same time, following the assassination of Tommy Maloy, a labor racketeer and extortionist, in 1935. Since then, under the presidency of Mr. Browne, personally represented by Bioff and Circella, the union has grown so large in numbers and so powerful by intimidation that last fall Browne and Bioff made the grave mistake of trying to snatch all the actors' unions. After that it was intended, if all went well, to snatch the writers' unions, too. But the actors put up a shrill squawk, and the C. I. O. unions in Hollywood also made propaganda against Browne and Bioff.

The American Federation of Labor, however, like Ferdinand the Bull, just sat under a tree smelling the flowers, and to this hour has done nothing about anything, leaving the rank and file and the public to believe that criminal racketeers are not unwelcome at the head of the table in Labor's House.

WILLIE BIOFF

Is he, as his Chicago police record indicates, an unregenerate racketeer or merely, as he says himself, the victim of "the moneyed interests and the Communists." See Mr. Pegler's observations on this page today

Robinson's Letters

"I DON'T CARE for X's letters," the poet Robinson once said of a correspondent. "They read as though he had written them for posterity." Not so these "Selected Letters of Edwin Arlington Robinson" (Macmillan, $2.50); they express the man pungent, passionate and reticent. He must have written thousands of pages of letters; he might have smiled at this 178-page selection, so austerely edited by Ridgely Torrence and three other friends.

Here is the young man, not yet certain whether prose, poetry or drama would be his vehicle, but certain that authorship was the be-all of his existence. Here is the man determining, in mid-forties, that prose is not his natural vehicle. "I have to hammer and dig and sweat and swear and throw away and do over again ad infinitum even the smallest kind of serious article." Yet here are quick literary judgments which reveal the crabapple tartness of the son of Maine:

On "Thoreau cowardice" (1899): "For God's sake, says the sage, let me get away into the wilderness where I shall not have a single human responsibility or the first symptoms of social discipline, let me be a pickerel or a skunk cabbage, anything that will not have to meet the realities of civilization . . . There is a wholesomeness about some people that is positively unhealthy, and I find it in this essay." (Thoreau on Walking).

On Santayana's poetry: "He has something to say, and he says it well; but somehow it seems like something written by a highly sophisticated corpse. If Santayana ever cuts himself in your presence try to get some of his blood."

On first reading "Wuthering Heights" (1899): "I feel as if I had digested a hunderstorm."

On reading the Old Testament (1924): "A most bloodthirsty and perilous book for the young. Jehovah is beyond a doubt the worst character in fiction."

On "Anna Livia Plurabelle" (1928): "Maybe you can read the Joyce thing. I can't."

On George Moore's "Esther Waters" (1901): "It has a message without being a sermon and for that reason will live."

On A. E. Housman (1934 and 1923): "I do not think of any living writer whose work is likely to live longer—if as long . . . His kingdom is a small and not very jolly one, but he is the boss of it, and that's enough."

On two women poets (1932): "Miss Millay . . . is an eminent little critter, and deserves to be eminent . . . Elinor Wylie . . . is to John Donne what The Millay is to Shakespeare—if you care to figure that out."

On free verse (1921): "I am pretty well satisfied that free verse, prohibition and 'moving' pictures are a triumvirate from hell, armed with the devil's instructions to abolish civilization—which, by the way, has not yet existed, and cannot exist until the human brain undergoes many changes."

Named admiringly in the letters: "Van Dine's 'The Canary Murder Mystery,' Valentine Williams 'Death Answers the Bell' and Edgar Wallace's 'The Frightened Lady.'"

On book reviewers: "The whole reviewing business, if it were not a joke, would be lamentable. If a boy or girl hasn't brains enough to do anything else, he or she is set to reviewing books. They might as well try to play the fiddle, and probably many of them do."

On himself: "I'm the damnedest optimist that ever lived."

On Helping Finland

By Mark Sullivan

Points To Consider

FROM THE POINT of view of American policy about Finland, there is light in present events in Sweden. Here in America, many persons think our Government ought to lend (or give) Finland money for arms. Others think our Government should give for purposes other than arms, for food and the like. Regardless of what our Government does, many persons think our people, by popular subscription, should give Finland money for arms. Other persons think that, by popular subscription, we should give for purposes other than arms.

The needs of Finland are three: She needs men, soldiers; she needs arms, including airplanes; her third need is food, clothing, hospital supplies and the like.

Of the three forms of help, the most indispensable is soldiers; without soldiers the other two will hardly avail. How many soldiers is a matter of judgment. Most estimates are surprisingly small. One person of good judgment says 350,000 would be enough. Another judgment is as low as 75,000. The more soldiers, the better. But in the judgment of qualified persons, the terrain and the other conditions are such that a surprisingly small number of soldiers, added to the gallant Finns, could hold off the Russians indefinitely.

FOR PROVIDING SOLDIERS, the natural source is Sweden. Sweden has the soldiers, and they are good; she has a fine army, adapted to the climate. And it is upon Sweden that the primary obligation rests. Sweden is the country that will face Russia next, if Finland falls. Sweden is a kind of back country to Finland. When and if the Russians cross the narrow strip that is Finland, they are upon Sweden's border.

This puts upon Sweden the primary obligation for furnishing soldiers. The other forms of help Finland needs—arms, and food and the like—can readily come from elsewhere.

But if Sweden does not give soldiers, other peoples throughout the world will be chilled about giving the other forms of help. The mere fact of failure by Sweden to act would have an unfortunate psychological effect. It is as if all the States of the United States were separate countries, and as if Maine were invaded by a foreign foe, and as if Maine's neighbor, New Hampshire, did not send soldiers to help. In such a condition, help would be less likely to come from Texas.

The Swedish King announced this week that Sweden would not send organized military aid to Finland. It is certain the King did not like to take this position; and it is probable he took it only through fear that by such a step Sweden might later be involved in the war between Germany and the Allies. We can feel sure he did what he thought was best, and we can sympathize with him. One can read between the lines of King Gustav's statement that he takes this stand only because his official position calls upon him to do it.

Almost, one infers that if the Swedish people chose to do otherwise, the King would admit that that is their privilege. The King, in his statement, spoke of "other ways" of help, "not inconsiderable assistance," that are already going from Sweden to Finland. It may be the other forms of help include soldiers—they may be going as individuals, or small units not in uniform. As we have learned to recognize "undeclared war," so may there be such a thing as "undeclared help."

Possibly the volunteers going into Finland from various countries may be sufficient in number and may be organized into effective military strength in sufficient time to save Finland. Next to Sweden, the obligation to send soldiers to Finland rests upon Norway and upon the Allies, France and England. It may be that soldiers are going from the Allies. Finland may yet have, from one source or another, enough soldiers.

THAT FINLAND should first get man power from other sources, is the first requisite to her ever getting arms from America. America is guided much by a lesson learned from the Great War. When it was first suggested we should enter, we were told, or led to believe, that all the Allies would need from us would be arms, ships, money and the like. We took it for granted there would be no demand on us for man power, except possibly a small army, a division or two, as a symbol. But once we had declared war, we were told we must send enormous man power. That experience remains in America's memory. Every European statesman making any calculation about America should begin with the premise that America will never again send an army to Europe—imaginably other forms of aid, but never man power.

If Finland gets enough soldiers from other sources, it may be that American opinion would press our Government to give arms, or money for arms. So far we have specifically excluded arms from the help we give. We have loaned Finland $10,000,000 for purchases of goods other than arms, and we are about to authorize $20,000,000 more for the same purpose with the same limitation.

If Finland is ever to get arms, or money for arms, from America, in material quantity, it must be by Government action. Arms means immense amounts of money, tens of millions. Besides, it is only by action of government, our own or others, that arms in large quantities, certainly airplanes, can be made available. The plane manufacuring facilities of the United States must be already working at full capacity on orders from our own Government and from France and England. If the Finns are to get planes from America in the near future, they must be planes released to them by the other governments.

Some Notes On War And Peace

II—A Fundamental Thesis

THE WORLD as a whole, and the United States in particular, is full of cynics who are convinced that because the settlement of the other war was a failure, the settlement of this war must also be a failure. The study of a little history is no doubt depressing. But there is no warrant in human experience for a pessimism which insists that no war can ever end in a good peace. If this war, for example, could end in as long a peace as that which most of mankind enjoyed for the hundred years between the Battle of Waterloo in 1815 and the invasion of Belgium in 1914, we should be entitled to say that it was a good peace.

To be sure, there were wars in the nineteenth century; there was injustice and oppression. But the wars were local and limited; the injustice and oppression were remediable and diminishing. There was enough peace to allow men to devote their main energies to the conquest of nature and the improvement of the standard of life; there was enough justice and freedom to permit the liquidation of many ancient wrongs.

PERPETUAL PEACE which eradicates all evils is not an attainable ideal at this stage in the slow process of civilizing mankind. This may be sad. But it would seem to be true. And if it is true, then those who can become interested only in a perfect peace are sentimentalists and are bound to be disappointed. And, as we know, a cynic is a disappointed sentimentalist.

We must aim at the possible, or we shall accomplish nothing at all. We must aim at a peace which is good enough to endure without serious interruption in the world as it is and among men as they are—for perhaps 50 years. In 50 years of peace much can be done; this is a sufficiently great thing to work for. Our forefathers a hundred years ago did better than that, and what they did once even we might hope to do again.

I DO NOT SAY these things by way of introducing some personal plan of my own for the establishment of peace. I respect those who make such plans, who design new constitutions for the human race, and redraw the political map of the world, and devise great schemes for organizing world-wide co-operation. But, though they may often contribute useful suggestions and though they do frequently throw light on specific issues, I do not believe that any man or any generation of men is able to imagine, much less to induce mankind to accept, a contrived and invented peace.

Concealed within all such schemes there is, it seems to me, an unconscious and unrealized premise; that the new peace which has been imagined will somehow be imposed on the peoples of the world by force, or that it will be accepted as a result of some miracle that engenders universal consent. I do not believe that any one will ever possess enough force to impose a general peace, and I do not believe we shall live to see the miracle of universal consent. Therefore, I hold that these plans, schemes, devices and blueprints are a false approach to the problem. For in the last analysis they assume that the victorious survivors of the war will be devout believers in the plan.

It is most unlikely that the survivors of any war will all take anything like an identical view of their respective interests, their immediate needs and their specific aspirations. Now it is the survivors who will make the peace. Whether it is a good peace which lasts a reasonably long time, or is a bad peace which makes necessary immediate preparations for the next war, will depend upon whether the arrangements in the settlement are such that they promote or discourage the reconciliation of the great conflicting interests. No war can obliterate the conflicts of interests. No treaty of peace can eliminate them.

But a war may be well-conducted so as to harmonize sound military tactics with a sound political strategy. If it is, a war may produce a situation in which the conflicts of interest are capable of being reconciled. Then a good treaty of peace can commit the peoples to policies which assauge the conflicts and will, therefore, in the course of time make it appear sensible to liquidate the issues by successive adjustments and compromises.

IF WE APPROACH the problem in this fashion, we shall see, I believe, that the conduct of war and the making of peace are not distinct and contradictory operations. They are continuous. That is to say, the strategical results of a war determine the basic conditions of the ensuing peace.

It is a confusing error to fail to understand that the strategy of war and the making of the ensuing peace are at bottom two aspects of the same thing. For this error causes the peoples to entrust the conduct of war to soldiers who do not understand politics, and to leave the arrangements of peace to politicians who do not understand war. They have failed to understand the profound truth of von Clausewitz's doctrine that "war is nothing but a continuation of political intercourse." This failure has produced the militarist who supports wars but cannot conclude them and it has produced the pacifist who declaims against wars but does not prevent them.

In my next article I shall try to illustrate this proposition by the example of the other war.

The Franco-British Partnership

It Has Profited By The Lessons Of 1914-18

By Andre Maurois

FRANCE AND ENGLAND, at the time of the war of 1914, committed grave financial and military faults. At that time those errors considerably retarded a common victory. However, they served as lessons to both countries.

On the military plane, the supreme command, obtained with such difficulty in 1918, was accepted in 1939 several months before the war by the British government: Gen. Gamelin is the respected head not only of the French but also of the British armies.

On the economic plane, the agreements signed by Mr. Paul Reynaud and Sir John Simon, mark, in the intimate union of the two countries, an understanding so felicitous and so remarkable, that I should like to emphasize their importance and also to show what hopes they permit for the future.

During the war of 1914, financial collaboration between the two governments was hesitant and imperfect. It was widely discussed; speeches and promises were exchanged; Lloyd George recognized that if those possessing the greatest number of trained soldiers put them all into the line against the common enemy, the same principle should apply for those possessing the greater resources in capital and credit.

But when it came to application of these principles, the British treasury was inclined to be hostile. Several times during the war, the Bank of England demanded shipments of gold from the Bank of France.

THREE WEEKS hadn't elapsed after the signing of the armistice before the chancellor of the exchequer denounced the monetary accord, which brought about a rapid fall of the franc. In fact, at no time had the resources of the two countries been really amalgamated.

The present agreement, however, well drafted, clear and complete, according to the communiques published by the two finance ministers, shows that the economic and financial resources of the two peoples have been completely united, just as their armies are united on the fields of battle and their fleets working in unison on the seas.

From the monetary standpoint, the two countries have engaged themselves to deliver to each other, in unlimited quantities, all the pounds and all the francs without gold remittances of which each may have need.

This means that France can, without disbursing her gold and weakening her currency, buy whatever she wants from England, the British Empire (except Canada), Egypt, Irak, the Sudan and all countries whose money is on a sterling basis. In reciprocity England will receive all the francs necessary for paying the expenses of her troops in France and for buying products from everywhere in the French Empire.

When one considers that the two empires combined cover an immense part of the surface of the globe and that they produce, with few exceptions, all materials necessary for feeding their civilian populations and for carrying on the war, it can be seen that the agreement gives to the two countries the means of limiting their gold expenditures, thereby enabling them financially to "hold out" as long as may be necessary. Henceforth it suffices that France and England organize themselves to buy from each other the greatest possible number of both raw and manufactured products.

Special committees are taking the census of the resources of both empires.

Once this census has been completed, each of the two countries will give preference to the commerce and industry of its ally over the commerce and industry of all other countries in the world. The British government will say to the English, "When you can't buy British, buy "French," and the French government will tell the French, "When you can't buy French, buy British." This is, in fact, both our duty, since we favorize our companions in arms, but also our national interest since, buying with money that is furnished in unlimited quantities, we do not depreciate the value of our franc in foreign markets.

"Yes," the mistrustful French citizen may say, "all this is very well, but what would happen if one of the two countries, let us say the British Empire, whose resources are 10 to 20 times more important than ours, possessors of raw materials necessary to us, but which are also essential to them, refuses deliveries or judges that there is monetary interest in selling them for dollars?"

"Reassure yourself," is the reply, "this possibility has been considered. Each country has a real right to a proprotional part of the resources of the other for the conduct of the war. If that part cannot be given, then either country has right to a compensation, whether in cash or in exchange. For instance, dollar reserves have, just as material resources, been put in common. Never in the history of the world have two peoples allied themselves so completely. It is more than an alliance, it is a partnership."

DO YOU NOW see the tremendous possibilities of this mechanism? In the last war and at the beginning of this one, when certain products did not exist in France, they were brought from pre-establishlished markets; England did the same. The result was that too great a proportion of purchases, established by the services of different ministries, were payable in dollars or in gold. Certainly we now possess, together, a considerable number of dollars, both in gold and in foreign investments, but they are "war ammunitions" which would be difficult to replace and which we haven't the right to waste. Thanks to the Reynaud-Simon accord, the system of purchasing can be revised and consequently our stock of "gold ammunition" made to last longer.

And this is not all. Great Britain agreed that certain expenses, such as loans to neutral nations, maintenance of the Polish and Czech armies, until now supported entirely by the French, and blockade reparations payments, will be shared by the Allies in the proportion of three parts for England and two for France. This proportion is equitable, since England is richer than France and above all because France has brought to the partnership a "capital investment" consisting of the Maginot Line and an army that was trained and equipped at great expense. Nevertheless, it must be recognized that in admitting this three-to-two basis of sharing, England acted with the greatest of loyalty.

She did it because she understands the danger of certain past errors, she did it also because she has the greatest esteem for the intelligence and the character of Paul Reynaud. It is essential, when one negotiates with the English, to know them well and to be known by them. Reynaud not only knows them well, but he is liked by them because he has always told the truth. The agreements he signed are not only important for conducting the present war; they may open the way to permanent accords that will give the two empires incomparable power and security.

The Age Of Ersatz

Many progressives believed in the immediate collapse of Hitler's power when he announced the policy of autarchy . . . The belief that increasing scientific knowledge makes for closer economic interdependence, and, what was often stated as a corollary to this, the belief that this interdependence provides a guarantee of world peace, were dogmas universally held by progressive thinkers in the nineteenth century. This was not unnatural in the first flush of surprise which followed the introduction of steam navigation, transcontinental railways and oceanic telegraphy.

Our own perspective should be different. We need only recall that Chile saltpeter can now be made anywhere, that hospitals are using radioactive sodium prepared from ordinary salt, instead of having to import the rare radioactive minerals, . . . that we may soon be making most of our machinery of aluminum from the clay of our soils and magnesium from sea salt, that we are already beginning to feed our pigs on the disintegration products of wood pulp, to grow several crops of tomatoes a year by tank gardening and to produce sugar by agency of bacteria from vegetable waste matter.

'Washington Family' Among Paintings For National Gallery

The National Gallery of Art today accepted 11 celebrated paintings by early American artists. A gift of the Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust, the paintings will go into the pink marble gallery to form the foundation for a special section devoted to the advancement and preservation of American Art.

Most famous among the paintings is the "Washington Family," by Edward Savage, painted in New York and Philadelphia between 1789 and 1796. The painting shows Washington with one hand resting on a plan for the "Capital City," which was afterwards to bear his name.

Then there is the John Trumbull portrait of Alexander Hamilton, the great Federalist; Benjamin West's portrait of Guy Johnson, translator of the Bible into the Mohawk dialect; John Copley's portrait of Earl Howe, painted shortly after the latter had restired as commander-in-chief of the British armies in North America, and five works of the celebrated Gilbert Stuart, one of them a portrait of Washington which did not return to this country from Ireland until 1919.

The 11 American paintings are important additions to the collection of paintings by old masters and 21 Renaissance sculptures presented to the Nation by the late Andrew Mellon in 1937, and to the great collection of Italian art masterpieces—375 paintings and 18 pieces of sculpture—presented to the National Gallery in 1939 by Samuel H. Kress, of New York.

1. "PORTRAIT OF GEORGE WASHINGTON," by Gilbert Stuart, which was brought to this country from Ireland, where it was sent by Stuart and remained until 1919

New Rubber Mattresses Are Aid to Beauty Sleep

Comfortable Beds and Seats Result From Use of Lastex

By Martha Ellyn.

EARLY Spanish explorers reported that the Indians in Mexico made bouncing balls from a sap that flowed from the "weeping tree." Latex, the substance they were referring to, is responsible for many of our present day comforts. It would be hard to imagine a world without rubber — no rubber for automobiles, no rubber for galoshes, overshoes and raincoats and the many other thousand articles made from it.

Martha Ellyn

Research has gone steadily forward in creating new uses for rubber. One especially interesting use to which it has been put recently is filler for upholstery and mattresses. Latex, the milky sap of the rubber tree, is put through a whipping process during which air is injected under pressure and then the rubber is baked like a meringue, so that the air bubbles stay up. For several years hospitals, bus, airline, steamship and railroad companies have used this new product in seats and sleeping units. Only recently has it begun to be utilized in furniture for the home. One of the most domestic uses thus far is for mattresses.

This modern mattress is completely odorless and it may be cleansed with soap and warm water. The ticking is easily removed and put back on the same day. They are very hygienic. Moths fly right by the mattress and bugs find no place there because of the slightly antiseptic qualities of the rubber. They are a boon to the asthma and hay-fever sufferers. There is no place for dust and lint to collect, as the mattress is truly non-allergic in every way.

The ticking may be matched to bedroom color schemes, as it comes in a wide assortment of styles and colors. And there are other uses for this specially processed rubber, such as for upholstering in your living room and and the rubber flooring in the kitchen.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Fearing Death, Expectant Mother Plans to Will Child To Her Family's Care; Should Friend Sign Paper?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: One of my good friends is expecting a child shortly and she seems very happy about it. But the other night when she came to me, she said she wanted me to "witness" a document for her. It seems she is afraid of child birth, and if anything should happen to her, she wants the baby to go to her mother. She wishes to leave a testament to that effect, signed by herself and her husband and witnessed by me.

It seems when she first broached the idea, her husband made no objections, but the other night he seemed doubtful. Now, my friend is afraid that he might entrust the child to his family's care, in case anything happened to her, and she fears the child might not be brought up the way she would want to bring it up. So that is why she wants to leave a signed statement of her wishes. Would I be doing the right thing in signing such a paper? ANGELICA.

DEAR ANGELICA: Rather than concoct a document designed to disinherit her husband of his child, this expectant mother should take her fears to a physician, that they may be explained away. Knowledge dispels dread, in cases of this kind, even as intelligent prenatal care, from the early months of pregnancy until the time of delivery, eliminates danger. Your friend is cravenly surrendering to hysteria, at a time when she should be possessing herself of courage and serenity.

Moreover, the kind of "paper" she proposes would contitute an insult to her husband, and might, if its purpose were executed, do great psychic injury to the child. The child who has lost one parent has special need of the other parent's constant companionship—and no amount of grandmotherly devotion is as healthful, for a child, as a natural parent's unswerving interest.

Aside from these considerations, it is doubtful whether the suggested testament would have legal validity. The process of legitimate paternity automatically invests both parents with co-guardianship of a child, and court action alone, establishing the fact of a parent's total unfitness for this socially responsible role, can annul his guardian's status or delegate his guardian's responsibilities to other shoulders, during his lifetime. So, as I see it, your friend's suggestion is (1) a neurasthenic notion and (2) an unworkable proposition. Therefore, I think you should keep clear if it. M. H.

Girl Asks Discussion Of 'Hat Tipping' Custom

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What do you think of the "hat tipping" custom in general? And in particular, do you think it should be expected from boys of the upper elementary school level, when they speak to ladies? It is so largely neglected in modern home teaching that, when stressed at school, it seems more of an affectation than a courtesy. Will you give us your view on the matter? Also, will you tell he if a girl should hold her escort's hat, when they are seated in a public gathering? P. E. W.

Philosophers Tell Value Of Beautiful Manners

DEAR J. E. W.: During the past fortnight, I have had the pleasure of rediscovering, in part, the noble writings of two American philosophers, Ralph Waldo Emerson and Benjamin Franklin—both of whom have much to say concerning the spiritual and social value of beautiful manners. The boy or girl who establishes intellectual acquaintanceship with such minds as theirs must recognize that refinement of feeling invariably reveals itself in gracious deportment, which may be stylized or artless, taught or untaught.

In our civilization, the gesture of a man's uncovering his head presumably is an instinctive (a mute but eloquent) gesture of respect or reverence, and I should think it is never amiss for a gentleman to indicate, in such manner, his high regard for womankind. Also, it has been said that the degree of one's civilization is commensurate with the degree of one's adaptability to one's environment; or, to paraphase, "One's ability, when in Rome, to do as the Romans do."

Thus, it seems to me that the boy who "tips his hat" (crude phrase!) to a lady, thereby signifies not only a capacity for reverence in his nature (which is to say, a spiritual element), but also indicates, as a citizen of our scheme of things, a commendable degree of "civilization." If he is so unfortunate as to lack intrinsic refinement of feeling, such as would spontaneously prompt the courtly gesture; and if, in addition, he has been denied childhood training in the superficial forms of graceful deportment—then, it seems to me, he should be grateful for the "upper elementary school" discipline which drills him in a gentleman's ways. He should not disdain such forms as affections, but should diligently employ them as potential assets and constructive accomplishments.

As for a girl's holding her escort's hat on her lap when seated at a public gathering—it is not considered "the correct thing." She is his social companion, not his lackey. And if he will look about him he will likely find under the seat or elsewhere, accommodations for anchoring his hat until he is ready to restore it to his cranium. If such equipment is lacking, he should look out for his headgear himself. M. H.

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

The Inseparables

Why do so many people appear in bunches,
When they go out to parties and lunches?

I.

Take the case of the Tenacious Two,
Who seem to be stuck together with glue.
The firmly soldered married pair,
Who are seen cheek by jowel everywhere.
Who sit side by side in all public places,
At banquets, theaters, chariot races,
In boxes, motor cars, drawing rooms,
To pry them apart let no one presume.

II.

Or take Miss X and her girl chum
No Tweedledee without Tweedledum;
You dare not invite one without the other,
Though their double presence does everyone smother;
Then there's Miss X and her doting Ma,
Who at social events are anathema;
Yet one cannot be left behind,
So all their friends must be intertwined

III.

And then we have the sister act
(Doubles make a better frontal attack),
But it always proves quite, quite confusing,
And to hostesses not at all amusing;
And also the girl who cannot eat lunch,
Without her office pal beside her to crunch,
And the "girls" of 40 who team up to shop,
And make of the whole proceedings a flop.

IV.

And the tiresome twos who dress alike,
The mother gowned like her little tyke,
The husband and wife who each buy a suit,
From the same bolt of cloth—now isn't that cute?
Next in line are the Terrific Threes,
Mamma and Papa, the tot at their knees,
Who arrive early or late to suit Junior's nap,
And encourage him to be a social thunderclap.

V.

And the married couple who bring their sister,
If she'd stayed at home no one would have missed her;
The bachelor guarded by female relations,
Who save him from any "difficult" situations!
Equally bad is the social quartet,
The two couples scrambled like an omelet,
Who "run around" every place together,
Until their friendship strikes stormy weather.

VI.

And worst of all is "the crowd we go with,"
The snug little group we spend our dough with,
Alice and George, Jane and Bill,
Margie and Mike, Barbara and Phil;
These and the others we see night and day,
At bridge, at cocktails, at the supper fray;
Our own little personal jungle tribe,
In which our lives we must circumscribe.

Why are so many people afraid to go anywhere alone
And drag along at least one chaperone?

Sensible Living Is Perfect Way To Keep Youth

Effie Shannon, Reputed To Be 70, Says Driving Helps Prevent Worry

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE are those who whisper that Effie Shannon, whose beauty is a stage legend, must be around 70 . . . But, even when they check up, these age mongers are never positive, because the known facts are that Miss Shannon has to make up to play the part of an old woman and that she gets fan mail entreating her for the secret of a perfect throatline.

Now that I've seen Miss Shannon close up, I can tell you she is just as beautiful as they say she is, and that she looks much too young to be the age reported. She says: I chose the age of 40 some time ago and I intend to stick to it until the wind blows me away!"

EFFIE SHANNON

What does she think helps a woman to keep young? Well, a good, sturdy ancestry goes a long way! Miss Shannon likes to talk about her grandmother who at the age of 99 read without the aid of glasses, had her own teeth, and whose hair was very stubborn about turning gray.

Next, she thinks work is important. She believes that the women who have interesting work to do keep young much longer than the ones with too much leisure.

Posture the Answer

As for that throatline, she says the whole secret is posture.

"It isn't a question of having a long, swan neck," she declares, "but of holding yourself up! A singer or an actress has to do that. Otherwise, her voice wouldn't reach the audience. I can think of nothing better to suggest for the average woman than a few singing lessons—whether she can sing or not. It is wonderful for the posture. Besides, it's fun."

But what the average woman really needs to make her acutely posture conscious is a stage director who jacks her up when she moves or stands awkwardly. Once a stage director tells an actress about her posture she stays told!

Driving Stops Worry

Another important thing in this business of staying young is the ability to relax. "An actress learns to save herself for the performance. She can't afford to burn up energy in doing things that do not matter, or in worrying about something that can't be helped." When Miss Shannon finds herself in a quandary, she takes her car out.

"You can't drive a car and think of anything else!" she claims.

War Forces Diplomats To Seek Friends Here

Many in the Past Have Overlooked The Advisibility of Getting to Know United States Citizens Who Count

By Hope Ridings Miller

NOW AND THEN—especially since the war—there has been loud wailing and gnashing of teeth on the part of a number of diplomats that there's simply no way to know "Americans who count."

HOPE R. MILLER

At a recent dinner, a diplomatic hostess whose snobbery has hitherto been as noticeable as her smart attire, was bemoaning the fact that she had been here five years and knows only two Senators, one Representative and not a single New Dealer.

"This year, of course, I've been especially nice to everybody," she blandly remarked. "When I meet new people, I always say to myself we may be needing their help anytime now."

That, I could have told her, is the whole trouble. Too many diplomats who have been here a number of years are just now discovering America.

Before war turned part of Europe inside out, the typical European envoy rarely bothered about making helpful contacts here. On arriving in this country, he generally took refuge in a social ivory tower built by some secretary who probably had as little idea as he about who really makes American wheels go around.

Presently, his activities were socially circumscribed. He entertained and was entertained by upper-crusters who so quickly smothered him with attention he never had time to get about and mingle with either the Cabinet or Congress. That's why most Senators and Representatives could generally count on one hand the diplomats whom they knew well—before the war.

Be it said to their everlasting credit that most Latin-American envoys and members of their staffs rarely have fallen into such error. For the most part, they have come to Washington with their eyes wide open as to which Americans "count," and they have consistently established their friendships on that sound basis. A number of European diplomats are now following that pattern to advantage, and the others are gradually coming around to it.

'Be Friendly to Everybody'

One Embassy staff that has not established a record as being courteous to rank and file Americans recently received orders, from headquarters I understand, "to be friendly to everybody." The implication is, of course, that most anybody may turn out to be "somebody who counts."

Perhaps any noticeable change of attitude would be less effective now than it might have been before the war; but still I know a number of important citizens who would like to get acquainted with some members of the Diplomatic Corps.

At luncheon the other day I met a very attractive woman whose husband is a power behind the headlines and who observed that she deeply regretted there seemed no way to get to know "the foreigners." She had met them around at many big receptions and had considered inviting some of them to dinner—but was afraid they might think her presumptuous.

"Of course," she added in a bolder flash, "I don't think they are quite so unapproachable as they used to be—not even the British."

Several Already Know the Secret

But back to the diplomatic hostess who for probably the first time in her career was seriously concerned about not knowing Americans who "count." While she didn't ask my advice at the time, I could have told her the situation even now is not hopeless. All she has to do is look around in the Diplomatic Corps and make a mental note of hostesses who go about, not entirely with the elite but with persons who "count" somewhere besides in social circles.

A few, of course, who are especially popular have the advantage in this country of being American-born. Cases in point are Senora de Espil, Senora de Boyd, Mme. Loudon, Mme. de Kauffmann, Mme. Bruggmann, Mme. Hurban, Mme. Lombard and Mrs. J. P. Summerscale. Others, however, who never set eyes on the United States before they came here as wives of diplomats have made friends far and wide ever since they arrived. I am thinking particularly of Mme. Ertegun, Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, Mme. Irimescu, Mrs. Robert Brennan, Lady Chalkley, Mme. Rajamaitri, Senora de Cardenas, Senora de Pastoriza, Senora de De Bayle and Senora de Munilla—to mention but a few.

Mrs. Paul McNutt Gives Luncheon In Her Apartment

Mrs. Paul V. McNutt was hostess at a small luncheon yesterday in her apartment at the Shoreham.

The company included Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mrs. Albert Cox, Mrs. Jack Selby, Mrs. R. R. Sayers, Mrs. Thomas Parran, Mrs. Harold Marsh, Mrs. William P. MacCracken, and Mrs. Fowler Harper.

Mrs. McNutt plans to spend Easter with her daughter, Miss Louise McNutt, who is a freshman at the University of Indiana.

Parker Wests Give Dinner For the Stones

Maj. and Mrs. Parker West entertained at a dinner party last night in honor of Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone in their apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Guests were Representative and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Representative and Mrs. Ralph E. Church, Representative and Mrs. Harry L. Englebright, Judge and Mrs. Peyton Gordon, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. W. D. Conner and Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis.

Returns to School After Whirl

Harris & Ewing

After a week or so of frivolity Miss Marcella Chandler, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Albert B. Chandler, has returned to her studies at Stephen's College in Missouri. Miss Chandler came here recently only to leave for a few parties at Washington and Lee University and a Cornell University house party at Ithaca, N. Y.

Social Lights Flash at Fetes

Several dinners had social lights on the go last evening. The Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold Sims, entertained in their apartment at Wardman Park when the Italian Ambassador to Russia and Signora Rosso were honor guests. Since their arrival here the Rossos have been widely feted.

Ranking guests at the Sims' party last evening were the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas and the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne.

Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat entertained at a dinner party last evening in honor of her sister, Mrs. Robert English, who is visiting here from Ottawa, Canada.

Another dinner on the calendar was given by Miss Marion E. Martin, who entertained a large company at the Sulgrave Club. Her guests included several National Republican Committeewomen, who came to Washington for the national committee meeting last week. Miss Martin is director of the women's division of the National Committee and National Committeewoman from Maine.

Louisa Rush Wed To C. L. Teter

In a quiet ceremony last evening at the Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, Miss Louisa Marie Rush, daughter of Dr. Garrett Chamberlain Rush, of this city, became the bride of Clarence L. Teter, son of O. B. Teter, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and the late Mrs. Teter.

Immediately after the wedding, at which the Rev. Clarence H. Corkran officiated, there was a small reception in the church parlor. Later the couple left on a motor trip to Florida.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a blue frock, street length, and a navy blue straw hat. A corsage of yellow roses completed her costume. Garrett C. Rush, her brother, served as best man.

On their return, the couple will live in Washington.

Mary E. Jones Becomes Bride Of Mr. Goodman

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Jones, of University Park, Md., announce the marriage on December 18 in Manassas, Va., of their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, to Herbert H. Goodman. Upon their return from a honeymoon in Florida, the couple will live at the Cavalier Apartments in Washington.

The bride attended the University of California, where Dr. Jones headed the Division of truck crops in the Agricultural College. In 1936 he came to University Park to serve in the Bureau of Plant Industry. The bride studied at the University of Maryland, where she was a member of Alpha Omicron Pi. She is a graduate of Strayer College.

Garrett Heads Ball Committee

It goes without saying that no Thrift Shop ball would be complete unless George Angus Garrett was chairman of the floor committee. So Mrs. John R. Williams just called to remind him that the Leap Year ball was to be held at Sulgrave Club on Wednesday evening, March 6, and to get busy selecting his aides.

Admiral George Pettengill, Admiral Emory Scott Land, Gen. Edwin M. Watson, Capt. Paul H. Bastedo, Joseph McCammon, Hugh D. Auchincloss, John Caswell, jr., Myron A. Hofer, Chauncey G. Parker, jr., McKee Dunn, Thomas Leiter, Nelson Perin, James Clement Dunn and Philip O. Coffin comprise the committee.

Mrs. Henry W. Miller is chairman of the supper committee, no small task, for each year supper must be provided for 500 guests and every bit of the food is donated by the members of the six boards comprising the Thrift Shop.

Other members of the board working with Mrs. Williams are Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. Ormsby McCammon, Miss Abbie McCammon, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mrs. Edward B. F. W. Bullocks Mark 25 Years Of Marriage

Couple Entertains At Dinner Dance At Country Club

Celebrating their silver wedding anniversary, Maj. and Mrs. Frank W. Bullock entertained at a dinner-dance for 25 last evening at the Army-Navy Country Club.

The real celebration didn't begin until the clock struck midnight, because today is the actual anniversary date, but it was a merry party all evening, with an anniversary wedding cake centering the table and decorations in white and silver. Mrs. Bullock, who was gowned in frothy pink lace with a corsage of gardenias, wore family heirloom jewels of antique English silver. The pieces, a quaint locket on a rose-pattern chain and a bracelet have been in Maj. Bullock's family since 1796. They were a gift to Mrs. Bullock from her mother-in-law.

Guests at the dinner includued the Chief of the Signal Corps, Maj. Gen. Joseph O. Mauborgne, and Mrs. Mauborgne, Col. F. F. Akin, Col. and Mrs. George E. Kumpe, Maj. and Mrs. Thomas C. Rives, Maj. and Mrs. A. B. Jones, Maj. and Mrs. Stephen H. Sherrill, Maj. and Mrs. Albert L. Lane, Maj. and Mrs. James H. B. Bogman, Maj. and Mrs. Byron A. Falk, Capt. and Mrs. George A. Bicher, Capt. and Mrs. Wesley T. Guest and Capt. and Mrs. Eugene V. Elder.

Wheeler, Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. Richard Kleberg, Mrs. Thurman W. Arnold, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Thomas F. MISS MARY AMANDA HUNT, whose engagement to Charles Kenneth Fewell is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Hunt, jr. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI will return to Washington next week or shortly thereafter to work out final details of his forthcoming musical Odyssey. Besides musicians, the dream cruise to South America, which he plans will also carry about 500 music-loving tourists, who will have the privilege of hearing three concerts a week conducted on board by the maestro.

Greta Garbo's erstwhile beau is serving without salary and footing all the preliminary expenses in his interest in promoting good will between this country and Latin America. His party, which gets under way July 5, will include about 100 musicians whom he is busy assembling for weeks of strenuous rehearsals.

A Washingtonian already signed up for the idyllic trip is Mrs. Samuel Conner, Democratic National Committeewoman from Kentucky. She plans to join the boat/oad in Havana or some other stop, as she wants first to attend both national political conventions.

MUSIC AND HORSE RACING, usually poles apart, will be effectively combined in Kentucky the first week-end in May. On Friday, the day before the famous Derby, Stokowski will conduct a program in memory of Stephen Foster, who lived in Louisville, married there, and later went to New York, where he died penniless. The Louisville orchestra is furnishing a hundred musicians for the Foster festival, which will be held at Bardstown. Actor Walter Connally will be master of ceremonies and Bing Crosby is promised as an added attraction.

An enormous buffet luncheon for politicos and other dignitaries will follow the concert, and the next day the tall, white-haired conductor will attend the races. Mrs. Connor, who always organizes a house party for the Derby, is already working on a group for this year. Friends of the "Chip" Roberts are hoping that they, too, will get their annual crowd together and go down by private car for the racing classic.

EVE CURIE fans will be glad to hear that she hopes to return to Washington in April for another visit. When she stopped in the Capital last month Mlle. Curie divided her time between the White House and the French Embassy.

A POLITE SCHISM is beginning to be noticed in local circles concerning the current rush to join organizations for the relief of war victims. A handful of people are beginning to rebel against knitting and ticket selling for benefits, maintaining that Americans should help their own country first. But they usually end up, despite principles, by doing neither. The American unemployed are seemingly just not dramatic enough and besides it's so simple to blame them on Mr. Roosevelt.

The last State Department release on American organizations for assistance to Europeans shows almost 300 listed. There is even one for the specific aid of victims of the Twentieth Arrondissement in Paris—to say nothing of several societies for relief to so-far undevastated Scotland.

WITH A FINNISH MINISTER as guest of honor at the luncheon of the Seventy-fourth Congressional Club yesterday, over 100 ladies turned up. At the last meeting before, there were exactly 14 members present.

THE EXODUS from Washington continues, with those obliged to remain behind seeking consolation in buying a spring hat. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., hope to leave today for a vacation in California and Mrs. Richard Sanger has already gone to visit a sister there.

THE GOVERNOR of the Virgin Islands and Mrs. Lawrence Cramer are staying at the Hay Adams House with their baby son, Lawrence Cramer, jr. As the Governor dislikes to call his son "Junior," he calls him "Oscar."

Fifth Grand Regent to Visit D. C. Women of the Moose

Mrs. Mary Sisson Wallace Will Pay Official Call at Columbia Chapter Tomorrow Evening, Plans Address

Mrs. Mary Sisson Wallace, of Cincinnati, fifth grand regent of the Women of the Moose, will pay an official visit to Columbia Chapter tomorrow evening at the Moose Home, 1414 I street northwest, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Howard J. Clark is senior regent of the local chapter, one of the more than 900 throughout the United States, Canada and Alaska, and became the grand regent of the College of Regents at the national convention held in Philadelphia last September.

Her extensive experience in chapter activities has given her an understanding of the chapter committee development program which the grand recorder, Miss Katherine Smith, of Washington, inaugurated some years ago and now directs. This program, on which the grand regent will talk to the local chapter, instructs the members in Mooseheart standards of home-making, child care and training, library and social service, and comprises the basis of the Women of the Moose local and national activities.

The grand regent is well known in the Moose fraternity. She has served as recorder of the Cincinnati Chapter for eight years, and late as its senior regent, and is the highest ranking official in the national organization. She is a member of the College of Regents, the second highest degree in the Women of the Moose.

The home making committee of Columbia Chapter, of which Mrs. Mae Sine is chairman, will present a patchwork quilt to Mrs. Wallace for Dixie Hall, one of the residences for boys which it sponsors at Mooseheart, the community for orphan children maintained by the Order of the Moose, near Chicago.

There are approximately 1,400 beds at Mooseheart, and the Women of the Moose desire to provide each with a handmade quilt. The women of the chapters are "foster mothers" of the boys and girls at Mooseheart, and rarely a day passes, but gifts come in from somewhere for individuals or for the cottages where the children live.

An invitation to be present is extended to the nearby chapters of Baltimore, Annapolis, and Clarendon.

WPA Household Training Project Finds Jobs for 350 'Graduates'

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Among Guests Entertained at Demonstration Luncheon; Girls Completing Course Serve

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The household training project of the District Works Projects Administration has placed in jobs 350 "graduates" since it was started two years ago, Mrs. Mary Steele Ross, director of professional and service projects, told the group entertained at a demonstration luncheon at the 1114 O street center yesterday. Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., was among the guests, who were served by two of the girls, now completing the course and ready for employment.

A luncheon, such as was given yesterday with outside guests, is one of the tests at the conclusion of the eight weeks' training period. Mrs. Ross expressed the hope the period might eventually be extended to three months or even six months in order to prepare the girls to be even more efficient household workers. At present they receive training in all the essentials of housekeeping, in cooking, and marketing, cleaning, laundry work, bed-making, and correct answering of the door and telephone. Before taking the course, they must have a clean bill of health.

They are also given the advantage of talks by both employers and girls satisfactorily employed on employer-employe relations.

The girls, all of whom are colored, are trained in three centers, that at which the luncheon was served, another at 400 South Capitol, and one, recently opened, in the new colored housing unit at Langston Terrace. There the laundries, kitchen and recreation rooms are used for the classes.

The workers are paid half of the WPA lowest security wage for unskilled workers, or $13 monthly. There are also a number of uncompensated trainees from families on relief or of low income groups. As soon as they are placed in jobs those compensated are taken from the WPA rolls.

The project is sponsored by the Board of Public Welfare and the Public Employment Center. The city advisory committee is headed by Mrs. David Kadane, of the League of Women Shoppers. Others on the committee, which also is working for higher standards and better conditions for household service, are Mrs. Richard Hogue, of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. T. V. Smith, wife of Representative Smith, of Illinois, who was among the guests; Mrs. Myra Callis, Mrs. Christopher Granger, of the Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Raymond Clapper, an active member of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters; Mrs. Gerald Morgan and Mrs. P. W. Chappell.

Guests at the luncheon, in addition to Mrs. Morgenthau and Mrs. Smith, were Miss Frances Carter, president of the Bryn Mawr Alumnae; Mrs. Harold Walker, Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, president of the Woman's National Democratic Club; Mrs. M. A. Mauchel, of New York, a guest of Mrs. Brown; Miss Thelma Huber, home economist on Mrs. Ross' staff, and Miss Margaret Marco, who has come from Chicago to take the position of chief of welfare projects.

Dorothy Detzer To Give Address

Miss Dorothy Detzer, who recently returned from Europe, will discuss "America's Role in a New Peace" at a luncheon meeting to be held on Saturday at Barker Hall, of the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets, at 1 o'clock.

The luncheon is being sponsored by the District Branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom in cooperation with the Fellowship of Reconciliation and the National Council for the Prevention of War.

Reservations may be made through Mrs. Robert K. Burlew and Mrs. John W. Barriger, co-chairmen of the meeting. Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, local president of the Women's International League, will preside.

Azoans Meet

Mrs. Samuel Bugatch, a member of the American Jewish Congress, last night discussed its work at a meeting of the Azoans.

School Garden Budget Cut To $2,400

The school gardens, which members of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers consider a valuable character-building project, face serious curtailment with the cut in the budget appropriation for them to $2,400, according to Mrs. J. R. Lyddane, garden chairman for the congress.

The Board of Education asked $4,800, double that of last year. A regulation further hampering the project is that which makes it impossible this season to use District Repair Shop labor. This means there is but one laborer available for all 54 school gardens and no funds until after July 1 to hire more.

With spring almost here, Mrs. Lyddane and members of her committee are making every effort to have action taken which will provide funds to carry on the gardens. Although the children do much of the work in planting and caring for the plots, there is heavy work for which men must be hired.

Various parent-teacher units have been asked to report the amount they have spent on the gardens at their respective schools in the last few years. Only 14 have so far reported, some of them for a period of two or three years and others only for the past year and the amount is $1,400.

Although the associations have contributed generously to the garden projects, they cannot afford to supply the labor necessary to maintain them, says Mrs. Lyddane, and some other provision must be made.

Mrs. Joshua Evans Describes Trip To Puerto Rico in Zonta Club Address

MRS. JOSHUA EVANS, who has just returned from Puerto Rico, where she accompanied the group of specialists from the Department of Agriculture, talked about the trip at the weekly luncheon of the Zonta Club yesterday. Puerto Rico is suffering from conditions similar to those in our Midwest dust bowl, she said, due to the same cause, the cutting down of the forests. She told of having visited the schools and of the political influence exerted by the university.

Mary Sigman, president of the local Zontians, presided at the meeting, and Mrs. L. A. Delwig, of Washington, and Miss Viola Bateman, of Ontario Zonta Clubs, were guests.

TALK ON TEXTILES. Dr. Polly Kessinger Moore, professor of textiles and clothing at Maryland University, talked to the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, at its meeting yesterday on "Textiles of Tomorrow." The correct labeling of fabrics, she said is largely due to the campaign of club women for such requirements. Also on the program was Miss Elizabeth Winston, pianist.

Mrs. Frederick Kerby, the club president, presided, and Mrs. Frederick G. Hammer acted as hostess of the day. Mrs. Paul H. Butler, as chairman of the committee on revision of the by-laws, presented proposed revisions on which the club spent three hours' discussion.

ANOTHER MEETING—A talk on the Constitution, appropriate to Washington's Birthday, was given by Miss Hazel Nielson at the meeting of the Woman's Club of Sixteenth Street Highlands yesterday at the home of Mrs. Carroll B. La Place, 1347 Montague street. Miss Eileen Golden, of the club, talked on "Finland." Mrs. Constantine Bonos, the president, conducted the meeting.

U. D. C. LUNCHEON—Today the United Daughters of the Confederacy will give a luncheon—not in honor of Washington's Birthday—but of the historian general of the society, Mrs. William Cabell Flournoy, of Lexington, Va. It will be at the Mayflower Hotel at 1 o'clock with Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., the president, presiding. Katherine Hinton Wootten is chairman of the arrangements.

SILVER TEA—This afternoon, from 4 to 7, the 40 constituent chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star will cooperate in a silver tea to be given at 2600 Sixteenth street, the site of the proposed new Eastern Star Temple, as a benefit for the building fund. The matrons of the chapters will serve as hostesses, all wearing colonial costume. Mrs. Minnie J. Burdine, grand matron, and Edward C. Steagall, grand patron, will receive.

POSTPONED MEETING—The Wheel of Progress has postponed its meeting from Monday, February 26, to Monday, March 25. Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell is the president.

Rotary Ideal Key to Peace, Founder Says

Paul Harris Urges Tolerant Attitude In Talk at 35th Anniversary Dinner

Friendliness and tolerance, the formula of Rotary International, could perform "miracles" if applied to international affairs, the founder of Rotary declared last night at a thirty-fifth anniversary dinner in the Willard Hotel.

Paul P. Harris, who organized the first Rotary Club on February 23, 1905, in Chicago, was guest of honor at the dinner climaxing Rotary Observance Week in Washington.

At a luncheon meeting William Roy Vallance, assistant legal adviser of the State Department, likened aggressor nations which bomb unprotected civilians in defiance of The Hague treaties of 1899 and 1907 to racketeers and gangsters.

"A nation which violates provisions of these treaties, such as bombing civilians from aircraft, is guilty of an offense against international law, just as a person who throws a bomb into a store which does not pay tribute to a group of gangsters violates municipal law," he said.

Ridicules Emotional Attitue

Harris satirized the modern emotional attitude toward world problems, declaring that "the inhabitants of this planet live in the kind of world in which they deserve to live."

"Wisdom and emotionalism are incompatible one with another, so in international affairs we abandon wisdom and give emotionalism full sway, he said.

"We point the finger of scorn at nations which do today what we did yesterday, and we hesitate not to cast the first stone.

"We decry the regimentation of other nations while we intellectually goose step ourselves.

"We assume the sole responsibility of conducting affairs in our own hemisphere, brooking no interference by others, while we at the same time send a challenge ringing throughout the Occident and Orient warning all nations to comport themselves in a seemly manner.

"We deny other nations the right to their ideologies while we fight in defense of our own."

Better Than Bombs

Rotary's ideal, he said, is the ideal of international good will and the "belief that all nations have about equal shares of virtues atnd vices."

Discussing the evolution of international law at the luncheon meeting, Vallance called attention to the friendly relations between the United States and countries to the north and south as proof that boundary lines can remain undisputed when nations prefer handshakes to bombs.

"How remarkably well the machinery for the adjustment of boundry disputes which inevitably arise between countries has worked in the Americas," he said. "They have given practical proof that international questions can be settled satisfactorily by peaceful means—by direct negotiation or by submission to a third party. This is the essense of good-neighborliness—only when this policy is world-wide will lasting peace be assured."

Vallance urged members of Rotary International to cooperate with his section of the American Bar Association in the improvement of international relations and the development of a "strong public opinion for their faithful observance."

325 Attend Dinner

Vallance was introduced by H. S. LeRoy, chairman of the Rotary committee on international service. Guests at the luncheon included Jose Baron, charge d'affairs of the Cuban Embassy; Dr. Herbert Wright, head of the department of politics, Catholic University; George Howland Cox, director, George Washington University, and Dr. James Brown Scott, president, American Society on International Law.

Thomas L. Eagan, president of the Washington Rotary Club, presided at the dinner. Among the 325 guests were members of the 14 Rotary clubs from nearby Maryland and Virginia, and four from Pennsylvania.

Rabbi Norman W. Gerstenfeld pronounced the invocation, and Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox led in the salute to the flag. George H. O'Connor conducted community singing, and George A. Myers gave a tenor solo.

A dramatic sketch, "First Rotary Meeting," was presented under the direction of Bruce Allen, assisted by Dwight L. Harris and George A. Lohr. The cast were Henry W. Fisher, jr., William J. McNamara, William B. Rumple, Lester B. Powell and Virginia Douglas.

Other speakers were Charles P. Garvin, George M. Whitwell, and George W. Harris. Arthur B. Pierce was in charge of arrangements.

Among distinguished guests were the presidents of the Kiwanis Club, Frank L. Peckham; Cosmopolitan Club, William A. Edelblue; Washington Monarch Club, William D. Macy; Arlington Monarch Club, Grayson A. Ahalt; Gyro Club, Harry A. Tuke; Lions Club, Floyd Akers; Knights of the Round Table, Charles V. Imlay; Civitan Club, E. E. Merriman; Reciprocity Club, T. S. Grape, and the vice president of the Optimist Club, Robert Doing.

District Auto Inspection Fee Reduced to 50 Cents

Slash of Charge, to Be Paid at Time Of License Application, Comes In Midst of Debate on Car Assessment

While spokesmen for Washington motorists yesterday debated the justice of assessing cars at higher values, the intention of traffic authorities to cut in half automobile owners' $1 inspection fee was announced.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer revealed that the inspection fee will be only 50 cents and will be paid by car owners when they obtain their 1940 tags.

Immediate reconsideration of the basis used for valuing motor vehicles for the District taxation purposes was demanded by Washington I. Cleveland, general manager of the District branch of the American Automobile Association.

In letters to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and to chairmen of the House and Senate District Committees, Cleveland charged the valuation now used by the District was "wholly unjustifiable."

Compromise Figure

The new figures for assessing a car are obtained by a compromise between the "'turn-in" and "resale" values of the automobile, as published in the "Blue Book" by the National Used Car Market Report, Inc.

The new policy was adopted this year by the Board of Tax Appraisers, which last year used only the "turn-in" or "low" values of the car in making assessments.

George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, said the tax appraisal board "is within its rights" in its new policy but the action appears "to have been somewhat arbitrary."

His main complaint was that the District gave local motorists no advance notice "to prepare them for what was coming."

Tax About Same As Last

Cleveland said that although he had addressed his appeal to members of Congress, he was not seeking, at least for the present, a Congressional investigation.

Owners of new cars will not be affected under the new policy, since the cash value of the new car is constant. However, a car owner, who has the same car this year as last, will be taxed about the same as last year.

The Keystone Club official said most car owners, when they "have calmly considered" the new assessment method, will no doubt find that this year's assessment is not excessive or out of line with the value which they themselves place on the car.

Schools' Use In Evenings Found Costly

Mrs. Doyle Looks At Fuel, Light Bills And Warns Trend Should Be 'Watched'

Some of the evening activities in public school buildings may be cut down, it was hinted at the Board of Education meeting yesterday, after Supt. F. W. Ballou reported that expenditures for coal and electricity in recent months are running substantially ahead of last year's figures.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, warned that this trend should be "watched."

Dr. Ballou relayed a report from Lewis Barrett, District coordinator of recreation, showing that the buildings had been used 1,702 times from October through January this session, compared with 1,159 times for the same period last session.

This heavier use, coupled with the severity of the weather, has brought about the increase in fuel expenditures. The coal bill for December and January amounted to $62,030.11, compared with $55,268.82 for those months last year. For the same period, the electricity bill has increased from $18,866.69 to $24,264.41.

Much of the increase in use of buildings is due to the expanded recreation program this year. After the meeting Barrett said that unless the weather turned severe again he did not foresee that the use of the buildings would have to be cut down materially.

Dr. Ballou brought to the board a statement of policies governing the operation of the WPA adult education program in the District, by recent agreement of WPA and school officials. One of the nine items provides that the appointment of the District WPA director of education shall be subject to approval by the superintendent of schools.

Dr. Ballou said that the statement "will substantially clarify the administrative procedure and promote the development and efficiency of WPA projects for which the Board of Education is cosponsor with the Commissioners."

The board agreed to Dr. Ballou's recommendation that the matter of giving public school credit for classes in Civilian Conservation Corps camps "should be considered closed" until CCC authorities furnish more information on the subject."

Dr. Ballou said he had been unable to get a statement on a systematic program of instruction in the camps.

The board voted to accept the offer of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers to sponsor the "Children's Crusade for Children," a national project for the aid of European refugee children.

Citizens Urge Law On Adoption

Southwest Group Reiterates Demand For New Childrens Receiving Home

Resolutions urging legislation to control baby adoption in the District and reiterating demand for a new Children's Receiving Home were adopted last night by the Southwest Citizens Association, meeting in Jefferson High School.

The association also urged that the health officer of the District be empowered to condemn insanitary buildings without the necessity of action by the condemnation board. The Health Department's program of expansion, as reflected in requests for 1941 appropriations, was indorsed in another resolution.

After hearing an addresses by Dr. George F. Bowerman, District librarian, on restricted facilities in the library of the new Thomas Jefferson Memorial Junior High School, the association asked an increase in appropriations from the $12,000 recommended by the Budget Bureau to the $18,000 originally asked. Dr. Bowerman explained that although 20 persons will be employed on the library staff, their efficiency will be curtailed by lack of sufficient and suitable equipment. He predicted that because of limited funds, the library probably will not be opened until some time next winter, after the current appropriation bill is passed.

Harry S. Wender, association president, announced the probable extension of the Fourth street bus line

Chevy Chase Citizens

Lack of equipment was responsible for delay in removing snow from District streets during last month's frigid weather, the Chevy Chase Citizens Association was told last night by T. E. Bradford, of the Capital Transit Co. The association met in E. V. Brown School.

Though the District government and the traction company placed 371 pieces of equipment and 2,245 men on the job, this force was inadequate, especially since from January 17 to January 23, only eight hours of above-freezing temperatures prevailed. He explained that only 60 snowplows were available to cover 285 miles of main streets and highways.

Vaughn Men's Bible Class Gives Spotlight To Youth as It Celebrates 51st Birthday

Dorothy Jones serving Randolph Zeph, 92, and George T. Aldridge, 88, at last night's forty-ninth annual banquet of the Vaughn Bible Class at Calvary Baptist Church

The Vaughn Men's Bible Class of Calvary Baptist Church, one of the oldest and largest units of its kind last night celebrated its fifty-first birthday—by giving youth the spotlight.

Grey-heads and white heads, some of them occupants of the Vaughn "saddle" for 40 or 50 years, turned over arrangements for the forty-ninth annual dinner to the younger classmen, who kept 300 men gastronomically satisfied. Edward L. Tolson, jr., was general chairman.

Standing in a bunting-trimmed hall near the portraits of Commander Francis Vaughn, class founder, and George Washington's home at Mount Vernon, adult speakers visioned much hope for the future of the church, community, nation and world in such capable hands as were represented at the function.

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church and principal speaker, told the men that he believed in the church because "it is the only institution that can save the world."

Linn C. Drake, District Boy Scout executive and class teacher since 1934, said there were great world needs to be met and great expectations to be fulfilled, and warned that the responsibility of staving off an age of barbarism rested on church youth.

Another speaker was Page McK. Etchison, president of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, and religious work secretary of the Central Y, who lauded the adult's spirit in giving the younger classmen a chance in administrative work. That spirit, he said, will keep the class alive forever.

Earlier, Dr. William S. Abernethy, host pastor, declared "the future of the Vaughn Class is assured by these young men," and praised the loyalty of his congregation through the years.

J. St. Clair Hambly, class president, presided; the Rev. Edwin S. Tuller, assistant pastor of the host church, gave the invocation, and Chester C. Hutchinson and Earl Fuller were orchestra leader and song leader, respectively.

Among the guests were Arthur Copeland, second teacher of the class; Prof. Louis D. Bliss and other former teachers; George E. Harris, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, and a former class president; Randolph Zeph, 92, and George T. Aldridge, 88, oldest member; John Westwater, superintendent of the Calvary Sunday school adult department, and others.

B'nai-Israel Addition Is Approved

An application to erect an addition to the B'nai-Israel Synagogue, Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest, was approved yesterday by the Board of Zoning Adjustment.

Louis Ottenberg, who appeared on behalf of the Synagogue, said the enlargement was required to take care of the increased attendance during the Jewish high holidays.

In another action, the board approved an appeal of the All Souls' Unitarian Church, for permission to establish a home for aged women at 1802 Park road northwest.

Meanwhile, a demand for a rehearing of the zoning change which would allow erection of a Sears Roebuck store at Wisconsin avenue and Albemarle streets northwest, will be considered by the District Zoning Commission, its chairman, Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., said yesterday.

Mrs. William E. Wise, chairman of the Janney Parent-Teacher Associations, presented a petition with the names of several hundred citizens demanding the rehearing. Last Saturday the commission approved an extension of the commercial zone at that site.

At a mass meeting Tuesday night the Friendship Heights Citizens Association, which approved the change at the public hearings held on the application, rescinded their action.

Col. McCoach said he would seek an early meeting of the commission to decide the matter.

Eight other appeals were approved by the board of zoning adjustment.

The appeal of Henry Oxenburg, to erect an apartment house at Thirty-third street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, was denied.

The board also denied a permit for a gasoline station at Rock Creek Church road and Upshur streets northwest. This petition has been previously granted but after a rehearing was held the action by the board was rescinded.

Bandit Gets $5

Holt Declares War Means Lost Liberty

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, last night told 400 delegates from Washington youth organizations "it is not sissy to be patriotic" but warned that this country's entrance into war would mean the loss of American liberty.

Keynoting the first of 300 "Youth and Democracy" rallies to be held throughout the Nation under the sponsorship of the Aleph Zadik Aleph and 20 other youth-serving organizations, Holt declared at Roosevelt High School:

"We must save democracy where it exists." He added: "The tragedy is that many of us don't realize how much liberty we have."

Emphasizing that the "hope of this country is peace," the Senator said: "Youth pays the terrible penalty of war, not only in their sacrifice in the trenches, but in the demoralization that follows."

The youngest member of the Senate urged the representatives of the A. Z. A., the Y. M. C. A., Hi-Y, De Molay, Boy Scouts and Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs that "you must not be discouraged . . . although youth does not face a particularly bright future today."

The dictator governments of Europe seemingly have their attractions, Holt declared, but he warned the "isms are like a landscape that is only beautiful in the distance."

The youthful legislator quoted the Bill of Rights in stressing the absence of free speech, press and religion in totalitarian states.

The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. Harry Porter, pastor of the Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Church, after the youths joined in singing "America." Trooping of the colors by representatives of the young people's groups closed the ceremonies as the Police Boys' Club Band played the "Star-Spangled Banner."

Hit-Runners Hurt 2; Injured Woman Dies

Hit-run motorists last night injured two persons, one seriously, as one victim of an earlier accident succumbed to injuries.

John Trilling, 13, was seriously hurt by one of the hit-and-run drivers. The boy who lives at 302 Tenth street northwest, was knocked down near Twelfth street southeast. He was treated at Providence Hospital for a concussion and possible skull fracture.

John T. Shepherd, 71, of Eighth street and Potomac avenue southeast, was the other hit-and-run victim. He was struck in the 700 block of I street southeast.

James Jones, 16, colored, of 908 N street northwest, was struck while roller skating on Second street near F street northwest. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Driver Cleared

Minnie Pearl Nash, 30, of Arlington, Va., suffered head and neck cuts when her car struck a streetcar at Seventh street and Constitution avenue.

Mrs. Malvina Posey, 36, of 116 South Lee street, Alexandria, Va., died at Emergency Hospital of injuries suffered Monday when she was knocked down by an automobile in the 600 block of Columbia pike, Arlington, Va.

Meanwhile in Police Court, Richard G. Heinrich, 34, of Parkland, Md., was found not guilty of negligent homicide by Judge Edward M. Curran, who ordered a directed verdict.

Hollywood Does Wrong By Our Eugene O'Neill

Random Thoughts on a Misspelled Dramatist; 'Northwest Passage' Born Amid Enthusiasm; Ice Is Today's Philosophy Lesson

By Gerald G. Gross

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

EUGENE O'NEILL, WHO WAS PREMATURELY HAILED as the Great American Dramatist back in the twenties and whose star still shone brightly part way into the thirties, now seems to have faded off—in the showman's mind, at least—to the point where his name is being misspelled. (By the bye, is that the correct spelling of "misspelled?")

Witness the following bulletin which reached this desk yesterday from Walter Wanger Productions in Hollywood:

"The recently organized Argosy Corporation has announced the purchase of Eugene O'Neil's (sic) 'The Long Voyage Home' as its first production. The screen play is now being adapted by Dudley Nichols and John Ford will direct its picturization starting in April."

We knew O'Neill was long since in decline but hadn't realized it had come to where his name is growing unfamiliar, even to the folks being paid to ballyhoo his output.

It was inevitable that the O'Neill fable would prove to be that, just a fable, rather than enduring quality that lasts. Not that "Emperor Jones," as played by the late Charles Gilpin, or "The Hairy Ape," with the late Louis Wolheim in the title role, or "Anna Christie" with Pauline Lord weren't superb theater. But their author was too much the borrower and trickster for his work to go down the years. Leaning heavily upon Ibsen, Strindberg and the Greeks, reviving the aside and the mask, and writing plays that ran some five hours, O'Neill was long the rage, but rages have a habit of petering out.

But the ignominy of Hollywood knocking "1" out of O'Neill!

This picture "Northwest Passage" must have something. At least they must have given it an extra colossal premiere in Boise, Idaho, Tuesday night, according to telegraphic information. Wires direct from the scene tell of thousands storming the theater for a glimpse of the Hollywood stars imported for the occasion, of Gov. C. A. Bottolfsen eulogizing "the majestic scenery and the wonderful acting of Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan and Ruth Hussey," and of Postmaster Harry L. Yost thinking "it is marvelous that so perfect a portrayal of Rogers Rangers could be given."

Ice is a wonderful thing. It soothes the morning-after head, chasing the bumblebees which make a shambles of the cephalic interior. It enables Ohioans to enjoy swordfish steak, gives football players something to do during summer vacations and comes in handy at highball time. But since Tuesday night, when we caught the "Ice Follies" at Riverside Stadium for the first time, we're thinking that its most illustrious achievement to date is its having provided a foundation for one of the finest entertainments that ever went on the road. Grace—beauty—rhythm—comedy—skill—daring—it has them all, with something plus. Only the most confirmed ascetic would gladly miss it.

Taking them as they come:

"La Follette's Spook Party" will be given at the Hiser Theater in Bethesda Saturday midnight, according to an announcement. A slab of Wisconsin cream cheese is positively not promised to each and every patron.

All of the Warner Brothers neighborhood theaters will hold special holiday matinees today. That includes the Apollo, Avalon, Avenue Grand, Colony, Home, Savoy, Seco, Takoma and York, which ordinarily are open evenings only.

Dipping a week into the future, "Broadway Melody of 1940," with Eleanor Powell and Fred Astaire, comes to the Capitol the week of March 1; the Earle brings in "The Magic Bullet," starring Edward G. Robinson in the role of the scientist Ehrlich; "His Girl Friday" begins a return engagement at the Metropolitan, and RKO-Keith's will replace "Swiss Family Robinson" with "Vigil In the Night," whose stars are Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley.

TROUBLE BREWS IN THE "SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON"
Or so it would appear in this unidentified scene from the picturization of Johann David Syss' well known story which opens this morning at RKO-Keith's. Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 21 (INS).—James Roosevelt isn't letting any grass grow under his feet in lining up his picture schedule. Today he signed Horace Heidt and his musical knights to headline his second picture, "The Pot of Gold." Yes, this is the same "Pot of Gold" radio program that has been keeping your ear glued to the radio Tuesday nights waiting for a fortune to drop in your lap via the telephone.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Even though the show is scheduled to go off the ether soon Jimmy thinks the idea suggests human interest possibilities about a family who became unexpected heirs. In fact he describes the yarn as a human interest story set to music. But first young Roosevelt will sponsor "The Bat."

There is no more colorful director in all Hollywood than John Ford, whose "Stage Coach" was selected by the New York critics as an outstanding directorial achievement of 1939. John also has "Grapes of Wrath," "Drums Along the Mohawk" and "Young Mr. Lincoln" to his credit. I told you some time ago that John had visions of making pictures on his own. Well, he's doing just that with Eugene O'Neil's "The Long Voyage Home." He stars in April with his dependable aide, Dudley Nichols, scripting the screen play. The Argosy Coroporation, recently organized, is headed by Ford.

Don Ameche is the latest to incur the displeasure of his studio. He was suspended from the Twentieth Century-Fox studio and taken off the pay roll, because Don failed to appear at the Paramount studio, where he was on loan, for "The Night of January Sixteenth." He had been reluctant to accept the assignment and it is assumed that is the reason he walked out of the part. When Ameche stepped out, Paramount also lost Barbara Stanwyck through no fault of hers. A rewriting job was necessary, and she has a commitment at R. K. O. Patricia Morrison and Ray Milland were put into the Stanwyck and Ameche roles.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Cesar Romero tells me that he is getting married this year. To whom he doesn't know yet but he has bought a house and he says he has decided to find himself a bride; Helen Parrish and Forrest Tucker are Hollywood's chief romancers since Lana Turner and Greg Bautzer parted. Greg, by the way, was night clubbing last eve with Wendy Barrie; Busby Berkeley and Claire James a Sardi's tete-a-tete; Lola Lane and Dick Purcell, who deny matrimonial intentions but nevertheless are a steady twosome, dancing at the La Conga; Paul Muni's play, "Key Largo," closes in a few days and after a month's holiday he will head for movies and Hollywood; A. C. Blumenthal is a flu victim; Hal Roach, jr., and Mary Beth Hughes the latest younger-set twosome; the Bob Hopes celebrate their sixth wedding anniversary with a party for relatives and friends; the Fred Astaires leave for New York on a month's holiday to see the shows. The William Haines' huge party held Saturday night in honor of Duncan McMartin is still the topic of conversation. Artists painted pictures of McMartin over the many mirrors in the Haines house. Duncan, who leaves for Canada to join the army any day, was all for getting a glass cutter and removing the mirrors with his paintings intact. Only his inability to get a workman at the wee sma' hours prevented his taking the souvenirs with him.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Feb. 21.

"Be content but never satisfied" is the motto of Nellie Coffman, who, as most of you know, built Palm Springs practically single handed. She owns the Desert Inn, where so many of our movie greats go for rest and inspiration. Two other women, the Misses Geggie and Forline, put over a performance of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo down there. The event was an achievement, and unique experience for the ballet. They had never before seen Palm Springs. So minute they arrived got on bicycles and scooters and had themselves a time. Leonide Massine said: "Why, this is just as good as Monte Carlo." The audience was, too, representing every State in the Union and a hundred million dollars of wealth.

Jackie Cooper, who's spending the winter there, has made a real place for himself. The townsfolk are crazy about him. He's into everything, even city politics. And was cute the last time Shirley Temple came down. She'd never met Jackie, so he was introduced and asked her for a dance—a rhumba. She hadn't done one, said she'd try. Her mother remarked: "For the first time I'm sorry there isn't a camera around. I'd love a picture of those two."

For years a friend of Clarence Brown's owed him $100. Recently he sent the director a note explaining why he couldn't pay back the loan. But yesterday, debtor returned the century note, then Clarence remarked: "That letter you sent me was so pathetic I nearly sent you another hundred. I never knew you could write like that." "I can't," answered the friend, "I copied one my son sent me from college."

That unforgetiable picture Gary Cooper and Beryl Mercer did years ago called "Seven Days Leave" adapted from the story "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals" is about to be remade by Edgene Zuker, of Paramount. Whether Gary or Fred MacMurray will play the role has not been decided yet. And they're looking for some one who has the Beryl Mercer quality for the old lady. So you might begin sending in your requests.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 21.

BOAST: Sam Goldwyn invited Alfred Hitchcock, the director, to dine at his house, and there regaled him with the details of his accomplishments . . . "One of the records I have established in the picture business, is a very unusual one," said Goldwyn. "In my 30 years in this industry I have never been sued. Never" . . . "That's truly remarkable," Hitchcock assured him—and then added: "But maybe it's better to have been sued and lost than never to have been sued at all" . . . Goldwyn pondered over this sentence, then shook his head, and said: "I disagree with you. No—I've always preferred to settle."

RELIEF: Andre Singer is the Austrian refugee who composed the music for "Reunion in New York," the refugee-revue which opens at the Little Theater tomorrow night . . . Singer has been here by virtue of a visitor's visa. The State Department notified him that he would have to leave the country within a week . . . Charlotte Krauss, a member of the refugee troupe, is a protegee of Eleanor Roosevelt, and immediately wrote to the First Lady about this . . . Mrs. Roosevelt replied by wire yesterday, informing that she had arranged a two-month extension.

PROTEST: Shortly before Alexander Woollcott began his performance in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," he repeated to some of his Hollywood friends his objections to the slender, thin-voiced Clifton Webb portraying Woollcott in the Chicago company of that show . . . "Now just a minute," Helen Broderick protested. "After all, Alec—you're no Bull Montana."

REUNION: When Brian Aherne was Eastward-bound he spent one night in Amarillo, Tex. . . . After he had retired to his hotel room, he started to read the local newspaper, and learned that Maurice Evans' troupe was performing in Amarillo that one night . . . Brian phoned Evans at his hotel, four blocks away, and said: "Come on over here. It's been two years since we've seen each other" . . . "No, you come over to my hotel, Brian," Evans insisted . . . "But I've already retired for the night, Maurice," Aherne informed. "I'm in bed" . . . "Well, so am I, Brian," said Evans . . . "Well, good-by, Maurice," said Aherne . . . "Good-by, Brian," said Evans.

DEFEAT: George Bernard Shaw's play, "Geneva," which closed last week, might have received more attention from the New York public if the playwright's plans had not been frustrated . . . Shaw had arranged to make a special broadcast to America, a few minutes before the premiere. The British government, however, refused to permit this . . . "We can't consent to such a broadcast," the censors explained to him, "because we don't know what you're going to say" . . . "Well," Shaw told them, "neither do I."

CHATTER: Fifty-second street had two night-club casualties Monday night—the Troc and the Friars Inn . . . Thomas Mann resigned from the League of American Writers because he felt that the league was devoting too much time to politics and not enough to literature . . . James Hilton contributed the commentary to the new documentary film, "Lights Out In Europe," Frederic March contributed the narration. The musicians were paid on a straight union basis . . . Frank Hunter, the tennis champ, will head the syndicate backing Prince Mike Romanoff in his Hollywood Bar.

'Edna His Wife' Bringing Back Miss Skinner

Earle, Keith's, Met Open New Show Today; Other Programs Listed

"EDNA HIS WIFE." Cornelia Otis Skinner returns to the National Theater in her own dramatization of the Margaret Ayer Barnes novel. The monodrama will be presented every evening next week except Wednesday, when she will enact "The Loves of Charles II" at both the matinee and evening performances. Miss Skinner will be "The Empress Eugenie" at the Saturday matinee. Opens Monday night, with the Smith College Club of Washington sponsoring the initial performance. Three original modern character sketches will precede "The Empress Eugenie" and "The Loves of Charles." "Edna His Wife" is a full length drama.

Earle

"LITTLE OLD NEW YORK." Depicting "the good old days when cows roamed Fifth avenue," co-starring Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene and Brenda Joyce. Story has to do with a fiery waterfront belle (Miss Faye) who falls in love with Robert Fulton (Richard Greene), only to wind up finally in the arms of a burly shipbuilder (Fred MacMurray). Nifty engineering bit is the reproduction of the New York waterfront of 1807. Vaudeville headlines Calgary Brothers, Steve and Andre; Johnny Burke, doughboy humorist; Raymond Baird, saxophonist; Danny Drayson, dancer; Carolyn Marsha, singer, and the Earle Roxyettes. Opens this morning.

RKO-Keith's

"SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON." Producers Gene Towne and Graham Baker bring to the screen the story by Johann David Syss, featuring Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn and others. Time is the Napoleonic era and Papa Robinson, fed up with London, sells everything and packs the family off for Australia. There is a shipwreck—and there's your tale. Principal supplementary attraction is the March of Time cameraman in "The Vatican of Pius XII." Opens this morning.

Metropolitan

"GERONIMO." History is poured again by the projectionist. All about the terror-striking Apache who defied the United States Army. Plenty action—raids, massacres, pitched battles, et cetera. Featuring Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine, Gene Lockhart, Kitty Kelly, Chief Thunder Cloud, Ralph Morgan and many others. Opens this morning.

Capitol

"THE LIGHT THAT FAILED." Rudyard Kipling's novel is filmed once more, this time starring Ronald Colman as the swashbuckling artist and war reporter, Dick Heldar; Walter Huston as the hard boiled Torpenhow, and Ida Lupino, as the mean tempered Bessie. Filled with intense drama, battle scenes of the Sudan campaign and, of course, comedy relief. William A. Wellman ("Beau Geste," "A Star Is Born" and "Men With Wings") directed. Phil Regan headlines the stage bill. Opens tomorrow morning.

Palace

"GONE WITH THE WIND. Enters its fifth week tomorrow. Little need be said, save that more than 150,000 persons have now seen Gable, Leigh & Co. on F street, that the unreserved seat policy for matinee (except Sunday) is still in effect, and tickets may be bought in advance for performances through February 29.

Columbia

"REMEMBER THE NIGHT." Return engagement of the story about a district attorney (Fred MacMurray) who becomes enamored of the girl (Barbara Stanwyck) he's trying to convict. In support are Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson, Sterling Holloway and others. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"SECRET AGENT." Five years after its original release, this English spy thriller is at the height of its career. Its director is Alfred Hitchcock and the players are Madeline Carroll, John Gielgud, Peter Lorre and Robert Young. Second week.

Howard

Les Hite and his orchestra, plus a "colorful, un-kissed revue," take over the stage during the coming week, and Henry Armstrong makes his screen debut in "Keep Punching." The revue features Miller Brothers and Lois, Alma Turner and the Lang Sisters. Opens tomorrow.

Atlas

For Sunday, Monday and Tuesday the stage offering comprises Casey, Hall & Co., Stanley Brothers and Byron Sisters. "Ninotchka" and "Village Barn" are the double screen bill. "Gulliver's Travels" is the film feature Wednesday and Thursday. Friday is amateur night, when the pictures will be "Barricade" and "Nick Carter, Master Detective." Borah Minnevitch's "Harmonica Rascals" will occupy the stage Saturday, when the double film feature will be "Sued For Libel" and "Oh Johnny."

Breath of Erin

PHIL REGAN, erstwhile policeman and chauffeur but, for several years now, a popular singer on stage and radio. He headlines the stage bill opening tomorrow at the Capitol

Powder Plant Blast Kills 2 At Elkton

Fireworks Concern Making Explosives For Army Usage

By the Associated Press

Elkton, Md., Feb. 21.—Two men were killed and 15 persons, including three women, were injured today in a powder blast that wrecked four small buildings at the plant of Triumph Explosives, Inc., and rattled windows a mile away.

The dead were listed as Edward Kneese, 85, of Glasgow, Del., apparently killed outright, and Charles Gatchell, 32 North East, who died three hours after the explosion. Kneese had been working at the plant only a few days.

Four men, suffering serious burns, remained at the Union Hospital here. They were William Baker, 42, of Elkton; Burton Holmes, 33 of Chesapeake City; John Futty, 19, of North East, and Edward Startt, of Elkton. Eleven others were treated for burns and dismissed.

The explosion, coming in two detonations, occurred in a powder magazine, shattering that building and tearing a deep hole in the ground. Three surrounding buildings, all one-story frame structures, were wrecked.

Flames following the blast were quenched by the Elkton Fire Department.

Cause of the blast was not immediately known.

The company, formerly a fireworks concern, has been making explosives for the Government. Maj. Walter C. Hamilton, in charge of the Philadelphia Ordnance Division, United States Army, said he was sending Maj. John P. Harris here to investigate the blast.

Sheriff David J. Randolph and State Policeman John A. Burke also investigated.

Hospital Is Taxed

Spectators congested the area around the plant, located a mile north of Elkton. No one was admitted through the fence around the property because of the plant's engagement in Government work of a military nature.

Facilities of Union Hospital were taxed to care for the injured.

Among those treated and dismissed were:

Mrs. Jean Benjamin, 18, of North East; Mrs. Madeline Wyre, 29, of North East; Mrs. Marian Walback, 28, of North East; Walter Moore, 21, of Elkton; George Hitchens, jr., of Elkton; Howard Startt, 28, of Elkton; Craig Reed, 28, of North East; Roland Meekins, of Elkton; John Logan, 20, of Elkton, and John Baker, 21, of Elkton.

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY of VIRGINIA

To Our Policyowners and the Public:

The purpose of a life insurance company is to provide security for policyowners and their beneficiaries.

Some indication of how we have met our responsibilities may be gathered from a digest of the company's operations in 1939.

Admitted assets were increased by $4,663,325.92 to $105,334,172.49.

Insurance in force reached the all-time high of $528,053,461, increase for the year being $27,612,181.

Such figures manifest, on the part of the public, a growing friendship for the company and an increasing confidence in its management.

Certain old policy contracts were further liberalized. Nearly 10,000 owners of weekly premium policies who attained age 75 had their policies paid up. This was made possible by the company's gratuitous action in setting aside a reserve fund of $300,000, thereby dispensing with payment of further premiums, and making applicable to old policies, as has frequently been done in the past, benefits beyond those promised.

Through their investment in bonds of the government, municipalities, utilities, and railroads, and securities of other sound enterprises, premiums paid to the company have become actively employed in the national economy, to the benefit of citizens throughout the Union.

In the administration of its affairs the company gives full-time employment to over 2,000 individuals whose earnings continually flow through the channels of trade in their various communities.

BRADFORD H. WALKER, President.

Assets at December 31, 1939—$105,334,172.49
Policy Reserves and Other Liabilities—$88,377,242.76
Reserve for Contingencies, Capital, and Surplus—$16,956,929.73
Insurance in Force—$528,053,461.00

20 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1940 X*

Demaret Wins Western Open Golf Playoff

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 21.—Any day now John Kelly Lewis will plop into the Washington training camp, and from that date the Nats will undertake a most interesting experiment—the conversion of Third Baseman Buddy Lewis into an outfielder.

POVICH

The idea, spawned in the fertile mind of Clark Griffith, and heartily favored, too, by Manager Bucky Harris, also has the blessings of Lewis himself, which is important. That last is important because Lewis is taking all of the risk that the change entails. He has already made good as a third baseman; at least to the extent where he is now the highest-salaried member of the Nats. If he fails in the outfield, he may be no dead certainty to recover his third-base job.

The plan, of course, is to move Shortstop Cecil Travis to third base in the expectation that Rookie Jimmie Pofahl, the expensive purchase from Minneapolis, will handle the shortstop job satisfactory. The whole idea is designed to inject more hitting strength into the Washington line-up by moving Lewis into the Nats' weak-hitting outfield and retaining also the power in Travis' bat.

At third base Lewis was at best an in-and-outer defensively. But his lusty socking permitted Manager Harris to overlook the lad's fielding deficiencies. Not because Lewis has been a nicely-behaved boy and kind to his mother has the Washington front office boosted his pay every season without exception. His hitting, especially in the pinches, and his speed on the bases successfully covered his fielding sins.

There is evidence that Travis will be a better third baseman than Lewis ever was, defensively. When he finds himself on third next season it will be no new experience for Travis. He held the job for two years before he was moved to shortstop and in those two years he did as well as Lewis has done in the past four. The saga of Travis is interesting.

Travis proved a far better shortstop than a third baseman to the amazement of baseball men. It is axiomatic that shortstop is the more difficult of the two jobs. It entails the coverage of more territory and the handling of more chances, and on occasion the shortstop's throw to first demands a better arm than the third baseman's.

When the spavined old-timers slow up to the point where they no longer can cover shortstop or second they always try to find a haven at third, where the demands on the legs are not as great. Jimmy Dykes prolonged his playing career for a half-dozen years by that sort of a move and Rogers Hornsby, at the age of 40, stepped into a third-base role after 16 years as a second baseman.

It follows that Travis, who was really one of the league's fine shortstops last year and who is no green pea as far as third base is concerned, should be a better fielding third baseman than Lewis. And despite his failure to hit .300 last year, Travis is still regarded as a better hitter than Lewis, although not as dangerous in the pinches.

What will happen if Lewis proves unable to qualify as an outfielder? He may find Travis playing a whale of a game at third base and now indispensable, and young Pofahl doing very well at shortstop. Whereupon Lewis will be a nice ball player without a regular job, and ball players without regular jobs don't command Lewis' salary.

There is one notable precedent for Griffith's attempt to convert Lewis into an outfielder. The Yankees did it with Ben Chapman. When he first joined the Yanks, Chapman reported as a third baseman. He had been an infielder all his life. But Manager Joe McCarthy was unimpressed with Chapman's fielding. He moved him to the outfield and saw Chapman blossom as one of the outfield stars of the majors.

Chapman's, however, is an exceptional case. Aside from first basemen, precious few infielders are converted into outfielders. Occasionally a hitting pitcher will come along and make the change as in the cases of Goose Goslin and Sam Rice, but, in the main, converted ball players are infielders who change infield jobs. Ossie Bluege was a shortstop when he reported to the Nats, but he turned out to be the club's third baseman for most of 16 years. Buddy Myer reported to Washington as a third baseman and didn't make goor until, four years later, they moved him to second.

The odds are in favor of Buddy Lewis making the change to the outfield successfully. His hitting shouldn't suffer. In fact, because the duties in the outfield are not as arduous. Lewis' hitting may improve. The needed weight he could never gain as an infielder he may find easier to acquire as an outfielder. He already has the speed of foot, and as a third baseman he could go far for a fly ball. There never was anything the matter with his throwing arm.

What he needs mostly is experience in the outfield and that's why he's reporting here a week before the rest of the regulars. He knows his shortcomings. He was admitting to this department long ago that "the toughest thing about playing the outfield is where to throw the ball after you get it. I've got to learn the game all over again as far as throwing is concerned. When I was practicing in the outfield last fall I learned this much—you can look awful silly out there when you throw the ball to the wrong base."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 21.—The club owners, and the more timid athletes, are not the principal parties opposed to transporting ball clubs and football teams to and from their games by air. The chief opponent of the growing use of air liners by sports teams is the air line executive.

CONSIDINE

We ran into one tonight and congratulated him on the way the sky buggies had transported the University of Pittsburgh's grid team to Seattle; on the tendency of Tom Yawkey to shove his Red Sox in a plane for quick trips back to Boston, and on the proposal, by the president of the Texas League, Bob Gardner, that the league buy a 21-passenger plane and use it for shuttling the league's teams back and forth across Texas.

"We'll take them if they come to us," he said, "but we'd just as soon not see the thing spread any more. We have too much to lose if we hurt or knock off a well-known athlete, or a headliner in any field. Every time commercial aviation comes up on the floor of the Senate somebody gets up and condemns the whole movement because of Senator Cutting's death. I'd say Knute Rockne's death set the industry back five years, and that was true of Will Rogers' accident, too."

But the fear of accident was not paramount in his mind—as indeed it should not be, because the major air lines haven't had a fatality for more than 11 months.

He was also afraid that the extreme caution with which modern airlines work would bring on a kind of screwy ridicule from sports fans. We asked him what he meant by that.

"Well, we'll say the New York Yankees decide to use planes. They have a big opening in Detroit. The papers are full of their expected time of arrival, news of the coming game and so on. So what? So the flying conditions around New York might be so bad that we'd have to keep the plane grounded—and humbly apologize to 50,000 Detroit fans for failing to transport the Yanks. We'd be bound to have trouble now and then when the weather and the rigid baseball schedule conflicted."

We wondered out loud how much Yawkey had insured his Gold Sox for when he transported them by air from Philadelphia to Boston, to give the club a good night's rest before an important series. "I understand from the line that carried them that there was no special insurance on that flight," our friend said. "Of course, every passenger who gets into a reputable air liner is automatically insured for $20,000 by the company. The plane is insured for $200,000. Passengers can buy another $5,000 worth for two bits, and can go as high as they want on insurance.

"Some kind of a record for flight insurance was made not long ago when the stars of 'Gone With the Wind' were flown from L. A. to Atlanta. The film companies which own Gable, Vivien Leigh, Olivia de Havilland and the others insured theme for a total of $3,000,000 for the flight.

"I suppose a team like the Yanks would be just as valuable a load, and though we know they're safe a lot of us would sweat while DiMaggio and the rest of those superpriced stars were up in the air. And if one of them went on a plane trip against his will, and by some long chance got hurt, there would be hell to pay." Lefty Grove, incidentally, refused to fly with his teammates on the Philadelphia to Boston trip.

We mentioned Lefty Gomez's great affection for planes and the trouble the Yanks have had with him to break him of the habit of taking his eye off the plate and following some plane to the horizon.

"A lot of them like to fly," the executive said. "In fact one line recently gave a stewardess' job to Lois Waner, niece of the Waner boys, because the boys happen to be great air enthusiasts. But we'd just as soon skip that sports business. We're carrying more people with more safety than ever before, and setting records that no means of transportation can equal.

Houston Pro Beats Penna After Rally

Subpar 71 Yields $1,000 Prize; Bogey On 4th Hole Almost Spells Defeat for Jim

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., Feb. 21.—Jimmy Demaret, Houston's pride, won the Western Open golf championship today, swamping Tony Penna, of Dayton, Ohio, in their 18-hole playoff after a rocky start.

Demaret raced around the treacherous River Oaks par 35, 36—71 course in 1 under perfect figures as Penna folded after a brilliant beginning and finished with a 74.

Demaret's victory was worth $1,000. Penna's second position netted him $750.

Fumbles, Gets Bogey

Tied at 293 after a dramatic finish yesterday of the $5,000 tournament, the pair started cautiously enough, but Penna seized the lead with a birdie on the par 4 No. 4, while Demaret fumbled for a bogey, dropping two strokes behind.

The Houston professional passed Penna at the turn, however, by canning three birdie putts on the last four holes.

He's Out in Front

The victory tightened Demaret's hold on two of professional golf's top honors for 1940—the race for the Harry Vardon Trophy and the competition for leading prize money winner.

The apple-cheeked, good-humored former caddy has taken down three of the winter tour's seven tournaments—the Los Angeles Open, the San Francisco match play event, and the Western.

18 Colts and 2 Fillies Seek $50,000 Purse

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.—Speculation over tomorrow's $50,000 added Santa Anita Derby has been tossed in many directions by the naming of an even 20 3-year-olds and predictions for gloomy weather.

Always a difficult event for the expert handicappers, this sixth running of the mile and one-eighth event may offer added perplexities with the threat of muddy, or worse, track conditions by the 4:20 o'clock (P.S.T.) post time.

Erstwhile favored challengers for the fat purse, including the powerful combination of Gallahadion and Tough Hombre, Mioland and Exarch, went into momentary discard as colts and fillies known to like offgoing commanded attention.

Five proven mudders stood out in this respect: The Foxcatcher Farm's Fairy Chant, with Jockey Maurice Peters aboard; the Neil S. McCarthys' Augury; Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Chatted; the R. C. Stable's Royal Crusader, and the Millsdale Stable's Sun Pharos.

Names of 18 colts and 2 fillies, Fairy Chant and Augury, were put through the entry box. The Derby weight is 120 pounds, but fillies get a 5-pound allowance.

The complete field, with post positions:

1, Exarch; 2, Mioland; 3, The Gob;

Art Hendrix Upsets Tilden In Three Sets

Young Navy Coach Wins, 6-1, 6-1, 6-2, In Pro Net Tourney

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 21.—Art Hendrix, of Annapolis, Md., young Naval Academy tennis coach, upset the veteran Bill Tilden, of Hollywood, Calif., 6—1, 6—1, 6—2, in the quarter-finals of the $2,500 Southeastern Professional Tennis Tournament today.

The 47-year-old Tilden, for years the world's greatest amateur player, was no match for Hendrix, who used a smashing backhand to good advantage. Tilden tried to make it a baseline slugging battle, but Hendrix kept feeding him short ones just over the net, and Big Bill couldn't get there fast enough.

Hendrix kept Tilden on defense most all the way and won the third game of the second set at love on the veteran's service.

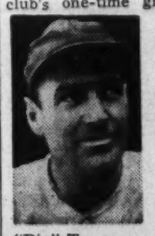
Sixth seeded Walter Senior, of Chicago, pulled a mild upset by eliminating Bruce Barnes, of White Plains, N. Y., seeded fourth, 6—1, 1—6, 6—4, 4—6, 6—1. Senior ran his foe all over the court, forced Barnes into frequent errors, and outsteadied him generally.

Frank Rericka, of New York, ousted Lloyd Budge, of Coral Gables, 6—3, 6—3, in a delayed third round match.

Top-seeded Don Budge, of Oakland, Calif., will play John McGrady, of New York, and Fred Perry, of Hollywood, seeded No. 3, will meet Rericka in other quarter-final matches tomorrow.

Pirates Need Good Infielder, Opines Scout Pie Traynor

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 21 (AP).—When the Pittsburgh Pirates open their spring training camp, the club's one-time great third baseman, Pie Traynor, will be absent for the first time in 20 years.



"Pie" Traynor

Replaced as manager of the Bucs by Frankie Frisch at the end of last season, Traynor is now beating the bushes as a scout for Pittsburgh.

Looking over the kids enrolled in Rogers Hornsby's baseball school here, Pie opined that the Pirates would have to uncover a good class AA infielder by the time the season starts.

"If anything should happen to Second Baseman Floyd Young or Shortstop Lee Handley," he said, "We'd be sunk."

He added he hoped to locate a fellow 28 or 29 years old who might "get off on the right foot" after the clubs open their camps.

Traynor, discussing the collapse of the injury-ridden Bucs last season, pointed to his burly chest and said:

"Some fellows, beset with injuries, can say 'oh what the heck.' But for me, something died down here. I'm like a kid. It really hurt.

"But the fans were swell to me. They were all sympathetic."

Wallace, of U. S., Wins Skate Race

Stockholm, Feb. 21 (AP).—George Wallace, of San Francisco, today won the 500-meter race in the speed skating meet, covering the distance in 43.6 seconds for the fastest time ever recorded in Sweden. In the 3,000-meter event he finished sixth.

Wallace is the only American competing in the European skating meets this winter. He would have been a member of the United States Olympic team had the winter games been held.

Maryland U. Jumpers Win At Ft. Myer

Old Liners Make Only One-Half Fault; Kane's Ard Patrick Victor

By Anne Hagner

The University of Maryland's jumping team came through with an astonishingly low score of ½ a fault to win the student team jumping event in the Fort Myer Horse Show last night.

The Terp riders, making the lowest cumulative number of faults since the student competition was started five years ago, were Fred Hughes, jr., on Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, Samuel Pfefferkorn on Isabelle Handy's Carrie Knight and Paul Weimert on Samuel Bogley's Ring Master.

Last night's victory puts the Maryland team on top in the race for the student championship, which began in December, when Arlington Hall Junior College's No. 1 team defeated the College Park riders by ½ a fault. Maryland now has 6½ faults counting toward the tricolor to be awarded in March.

Nats Start Search For Another Pitcher

Mound Plight Leads Bosses to Seek Castoff of Some Other Club; Waiver Deal in Offing at Present

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 21.—Even that supreme optimist, Clark Griffith, is painfully aware of the acuteness of the Nats' pitching plight. He is now amassing a sizeable telephone bill in an attempt to acquire at least one more veteran pitcher for the Washington club.

The Nats' bosses are at the point where they are not looking down their noses at cast-offs of other clubs. They have already put in a claim for one pitcher who appeared on the waiver list and expect to land him within a few days. His name is high secrecy for the time being.

Manager Bucky Harris admitted that he was watching the waiver lists closely. "No half-decent pitcher is going to get away from us if any club asks waivers," said Harris. "We are in a sort of a fix and we're not turning down anybody who may help us."

Harris didn't elaborate on the Nats' pitching "fix," but it was unnecessary. Stark realist Harris knows that the only man on the club who could be described last

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on rookie ball players trying out with the Nats at the Orlando, Fla., training camp.)

THREE—EARLY WYNN, PITCHER

Because his Aunt Sofie happened to live in Sanford, Fla., where the Chattanooga club was holding a baseball school, and because he happened to be visiting her at the time, Early Wynn is now a bright young pitching prospect of the Nats.

Of course the fact that he had some pitching skill was also a help, but in the main it was his lucky visit to his aunt that launched him on a baseball career.

He had been pitching around the one sandlot of Hartford, Ala., ever since he learned to throw a ball overhand and naturally enough he gravitated to the scene of the Chattanooga baseball school when he found himself in Sanford. And because the school was free they let him pitch some, and because they discovered he could throw the ball with a speed belying his 16 years Washington scouts signed him up.

It wasn't quite as easy as that. Because he was only 16 years old and a minor he was powerless to sign a contract and the Washington club brought his mother to Florida for that purpose. Mrs. Wynn balked at the idea of her boy going into professional baseball at that tender age but when the Nats assured her that he would earn enough money to enable him to complete his schooling, she capitulated.

At 17, Wynn was with Sanford in the Florida League. At 18, he was in the Nats' camp whence he was shunted to Charlotte. At 19, he was again in the Nats' camp. That was last year. Again he went to Charlotte in the Piedmont League. This time he blossomed as that team's best pitcher. At the fag end of last season, the Nats brought him to

'Keep Chisox' Fight Opened By Comiskeys

Widow Renounces Half Share to Take Outright One-Third

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 21.—The baseball Comiskeys opened their battle today to keep the name in a sport of which it has been an integral part for half a century.

Mrs. Grace Comiskey, widow of the former owner of the Chicago White Sox, J. Louis Comiskey, renounced her original one-half interest in the will in favor of an outright one-third share of the estate, held in trust by the First National Bank.

This move, combined with another action taken on behalf of Mrs. Comiskey's daughter, Dorothy, was interpreted by Attorney Thomas J. Sheehan as the initial blow in a fight to prevent the bank from selling the White Sox on the grounds baseball is a "hazardous" business unsuitable for a trust investment.

Under terms of the will Mrs. Comiskey was to receive the icnome from one-half of the estate, with the remainder going to three children. Charles 2d, now 14; Gracie Lou, 18, and Dorothy, 22. On the grounds Dorothy has attained a majority, Sheehan asked the probate court today that she be given her proportionate share of the estate valued at more than $2,000,000.

"Should Mrs. Comiskey come into control of one-third, her dower rights, she would become a stockholder and be in better position to fight the action to sell the club," Sheehan said. Dorothy Comiskey supports her mother in this battle. They'll have a fight trying to sell the club, you can bet on that.

The first Comiskey in baseball, Charles A., "the Old Roman," was a star player for years before he helped form the American League at a meeting January 23, 1900, in Chicago. When he died in 1931 his son, J. Louis, took charge of the Sox. In recent years the Sox, under Manager Jimmy Dykes, have been a scrappy, respected team.

Charles 2d apparently inherited the family love of baseball and last summer often donned a uniform during practice workouts.

Dunkelberger Golf Winner in Dixie Amateur

Defeats Mandley; Strafaci, Dowling Advance in Play

By the United Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 21.—Southern Champion Bobby Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C., today went into quarter-finals of the Dixie Amateur Golf Tournament with a 5-and-4 victory over W. H. Mandley, of Wethersfield, Conn., New England titleholder.

Frank Strafaci, New York, joined the round of eight with a 6-and-5 triumph over Bobby Walker, Jacksonville, Fla., who won the Champion of Club Champions Tournament at St. Augustine last week.

Others advancing were:

Fred Dowling, Toledo, Ohio; Arnold Minkley, Chicago; Earl Christiansen, Miami's golfing policeman; Dick Cuici, Flushing, N. Y.; Charles Whitehead, South River, N. J., and Don Allan, Pittston, Pa.

Handley States He Won't Sign Pact At Present Terms

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 22 (AP).—Lee Handley, Pittsburgh Pirate's infielder, said today he had made the Pirates what he believed was a "fair" offer toward settlement of his contract difficulties and that he "was not going to sign the contract they're offering me for 1940."

HANDLEY

Handley, who lives here with his parents, said he last conferred with the Pirate management in Pittsburgh three weeks ago. The infielder, who said he has been working out on the Bradley College diamond, where he played as a student, declined to say whether he had been offered an increase or decrease over his 1939 salary.

"I guess the next move is up to the club," he said. "I've been seeing a lot of basketball games, making a few trips and enjoying myself. It looks as though I may not leave here with my brother when he heads for camp."

Georgetown Five, Minus 2 Stars, Upsets Penn State, 38-35

Hoyas Hit Best Pace Of Season

Substitutes Schmitt, Kiernan Lead Way As Hilltoppers Get 7th Victory at Tech

By Bill Burnett

Minus two of its stars, but playing one of its finest games of the season, Georgetown quintet registered a 38-35 upset over Penn State's Lions last night at Tech before a meager gathering of about 1,000 fans.

What the crowd lacked in numbers, however, it made up in vocal strength as it shook the house with each turn of events in favor of the Hoyas. Al Lujack and George Pajak, forwards, were out of the game—one with an attack of tonsilitis and the other with a cracked shoulder—but the Hoyas went at their task as though the club was intact.

Schmitt Shines

Replacing Lujack, Capt. Johnny Schmitt played one of his first full games of the year and made a red-letter night of it. He tallied 13 points, most of them in a hot first-half streak. Jimmy Kiernan substituted for the other sick-list member and helped out considerably with five long, beautiful set shots.

In winning its seventh game in 16 so far this season and avenging a previous 31-22 beating by the Lions, the youthful and undersized Hoyas led most of the way and successfully stalled the ball for the last four minutes. At the half they were out front, 24-16. Their largest margins in the second half were 28-19 and 36-25.

Penn Leads Early

The only time the outlook was at all doubtful was in the first three minutes of play when Penn State went into a fast 4-0 lead. Johnny Barr and Cliff MacWilliams, the stars of the club, hung perfect 2-pointers on the backboard. Then in quick succession came baskets by Kiernan, Schmitt, Schmitt again and O'Grady, and Georgetown was away winging. That first 8-6 lead was never tied or bettered.

For the Lions it was a bitter loss to add to a record of 10 victories and 7 defeats. The only redeeming feature—and not a particularly soothing one—was the fact that Barr won scoring honors with 15 points. MacWilliams and Scotty Moffat, a reserve, came next with 8 each.

Roosevelt Five Routs St. Joe; Score, 36-15

Riders Use All Men To Win Season's 15th; Travis, Perlo Shine

Another strong cage team proved a mere workout for Roosevelt's rough-and-ready Riders yesterday, when Mount St. Joseph's, of Baltimore, bowed by a 36-to-15 count at the Roosevelt Gym.

Though every man on the Rider bench went into action as the club rang up its fifteenth victory in 17 games, the Mounts could make no more than 6 points in any period. Roosevelt's best was the first quarter, in which it scored 14 points to take a 14-to-6 lead. At the half the winners were leading, 18 to 9, and they shut out their foe in the third quarter for a 29 to 9 advantage.

Lanky Ernie Travis, center, and Guard Hymie Perlo stayed in the game long enough and shot well enough to earn scoring honors with 12 and 10 points, respectively. Four of Perlo's points were on charity throws, his field efforts failing to drop with their usual regularity.

None of the Mount players could hit the rim for more than 3 points, as the club lost its thirteenth start in 20 games. Manning Brown and Johnny Goodman were a poor best with three markers apiece.

125 Sharpshooters Aim Today For District Rifle Crowns

Maryland U. Defends Class A Title; Georgetown Enters 3 Teams in Competition

More than 125 eagle-eyed sharpshooters will shoot it out over the range at the National Guard Armory, Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, today in the third annual District championship rifle team match sponsored by the Marine Corps Headquarters Rifle Club.

Maryland University's defending Class A champions, led by red-haired Bob Laugherd, senior, who last year captured the individual championship, will enter two varsity teams and two freshmen teams in the competition for the three trophies and medals in the various classes.

First shot will be fired at 9 a. m. when eight teams, the first group of the 25 entered, will take over. The teams will fire in groups of eight throughout the day, pausing only for lunch on the range at noon.

Georgetown University, with three teams entered, will be out for a repeat victory in the Class D championships.

The match will be fired under National Rifle Association rules from the prone, kneeling and standing positions.

To the Class A titlists will go the District of Columbia championship team trophy to be retained for one year and five gold medals. Silver and bronze medals will be awarded to second and fourth place teams.

The Marine Corps trophy will be awarded for the first time to the Class B winner for one year, along with five silver medals. Bronze medals will be given to the highest college freshman high school team.

A gold medal will be given the individual champion, and a silver one to the runner-up.

Teams entered from the District include the U. S. M. C. R. Scouting Squadron, VMS-3; Marine Barracks, Navy Yard; National Capital Rifle Club, two teams; Georgetown, three teams; District of Columbia National Guard, two teams; Marine Barracks, Washington; McKinley High School; Fifth Bn., U. S. M. C. R.; Columbia Lodge Rod and Gun Club; Postal Rifle Club, George Washington University, and the Marine Corps Headquarters Rifle Club.

From Maryland the Terrapins have four teams, and the Thirty-fourth Infantry, Fort Meade, and the U. S. S. S. Reine Mercedes teams are entered. Randolph-Macon Academy, Fishbourne Military School and Staunton Military Academy, all of Virginia, are entered. The team of D. Q. M., Philadelphia, is also entered.

Terp Boxers Leave Tonight For S. C. Meet

Full Roster Departs At 7 P. M. to Defend Title in Columbia, S. C.

A full roster of Maryland University boxers will leave from Union Station tonight at 7 o'clock to defend the Terrapins' 1939 Southern Conference championship in the fourteenth annual conference tournament in Columbia, S. C.

The Terps will go through a final light workout at 10 o'clock this morning under the watchful eye of Coach Heinie Miller, who will be gunning for his third conference title in four years.

North Carolina, South Carolina, the host college, and The Citadel, three of the eight universities in the tournament, will also have a full squad of fighters in the meet, and they will be the main obstacles in the path of the Terrapins.

Newton Cox, 165-pound conference champion who has lost but one decision all year—a questionable verdict at that, is the main hope of the Terps, whose chances for a repeat lie in the performances of the veterans Bob Bradley, 127-pounder, and Nate Askin, lightweight, and newcomers Hotsy Alperstein, welterweight; and Izzy Leites, 175-pounder.

Johnny Harn, 112-pounder who carries the bantamweight burden, has been having hard luck all season, but he may spring a surprise on the conference champion, Billy Winstead, of North Carolina. Winstead and Harn both were beaten by Joe Block, of Virginia, out of the conference now, but Harn made it tougher for Block than did Winstead.

Askin, one of the smoothest fighters on the Maryland team, will be a favorite to get well along in the tourney. Last year the Terps had three men in the finals and needed victories by each to win. All three won, giving Maryland the title with 15 points—just one ahead of North Carolina.

The first round will begin tomorrow afternoon and the finals will be fought Saturday night.

Clemson, Virginia Tech, North Carolina State and Duke are the possible "dark horse" teams the Terps will worry about.

Gonzaga High And St. John's Clash Tonight

Catholic School Foes Renew Old Rivalry At Tech Gymnasium

A prime favorite for "hard luck" laurels and a team which may be either very good or very bad will be meeting tonight at Tech gym when Gonzaga and St. John's, the city's Catholic school rivals, stage the second edition of their annual war at 8:15.

Gonzaga, loser of the first clash several weeks ago in an overtime, 19-18, has gone through a rigorous schedule of 15 games and lost 7 of them. Those seven losses, however, were sustained by a total of 30 points—an average of four a game.

And in all of its setbacks, with the exception of the beating by the Johnnies, the Purple has held a lead at the end of the third quarter.

Against this tendency to fade in the final quarter, Coach Orrel Mitchell plans to keep a near-fresh team on the sidelines tonight to send into the game at the first sign of weakening. The return of Vinny Burke to good health and Elmer Raba's flashes of form recently will be a great help in this project.

St. John's questionable status among the District's schoolboys is due, if to nothing else, to its sensational upset of Roosevelt and its defeats by such notably weak teams as Tech and Anacostia. Lately the Johnnies have been improving steadily and their second consecutive victory over Gonzaga is not at all an impossibility.

Both teams will be eyeing a bid to the Catholic Tournament in Newport, R. I., during tonight's clash. With the wind-up of the Washington and Lee U. event in Lexington, which both clubs entered last year, the Rhode Island tourney is each teams' chance for a postseason outing.

Junior varsities of the two schools, which played a bang-up game before the previous parochial school game, will meet in another preliminary tonight, starting at 7:15.

Brock, Ice Follies Pantomime Comedian, Has Varied Career

Once Stricken With Infantile Paralysis, Famous Skater Becomes Star Athlete

By Jack Munhall.

We went looking for Heinie Brock, "inebriated" pantomime comedian of the Ice Follies of 1940, and found him at a hotel bar, drinking—a bottle of pop. The famous tipsy funny man is a teetotaler.

But that wasn't surprising. After you have talked with this likeable little fellow for a few minutes nothing could startle you. For Brock has a background few can equal. Beginning at a high school age in 1918, when he overcame an attack of infantile parlysis, Brock became successively a star athlete at the University of Minnesota, though he weighed only 114 pounds; a saxaphone player in a traveling orchestra, a national diving star, a telephone company employe, an investment saiesman, owner of a clothing store, proprietor of a boys camp and finally an internationally famous figure skating star.

Now 40 years of age, though he looks nearer 30, this fresh-faced batam-weight ice funny man, can look back on a career that smacks strongly of the fantastic. Usually when a fellow is stricken with the dead infantile paralysis and is lucky enough to survive, he seeks a quiet occupation and is content to leave strenuous doings to the more fortunate.

But Brock no sooner had arisen from his sick bed in St. Paul, where he was afflicted after catching a bad cold, then he entered the University and amazed Football Coach "Doc" Williams by reporting for freshman practice.

"Williams took one look at my 5 feet and 114 pounds," relates Brock, "and laughed loudly. 'You sure look the part of a football star,' he cracked, and then he advised me to reconsider before I got hurt.

"But I was a pretty tough kid, even though small, and since infantile paralysis had left no marks on me I determined to become a football player and I did manage to captain and quarterback the freshman team although I played in only one varsity game. Even in those days when quarterbacks weren't blocking backs, a fellow was decidedly at a disadvantage if he weighed only 114 pounds."

Talented in Three Sports

Football having been found a bit too exacting for him, Heinie next turned to ice hockey, baseball and swimming and became talented at all three sports. Though ice hockey at that time was struggling for recognition in the colleges and was not recognized as a varsity sport, Brock became a legendary skating figure in intra-mural competition.

In diving, he enjoyed even more spectacular success and on the diamond he became so outstanding as a shortstop and lead-off man that Russ Ford, the old Yankees' spitball pitcher tried to persuade Brock to leave school for a semi-pro baseball job in a Virginia League.

"My parents were quick to veto that idea, however," said Brock, picking up the trend of his story," but anyhow I left school two months later to join the orchestra of the liner "President Madison." For eight months we toured Japan, China and the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands and then I returned to college to finish up in 1924."

Upon graduation from Minnesota Brock flitted from one occupation to another, meantime developing into one of the outstanding amateur high-board diving stars in the world. As a member of the Illinois Athletic Club, to which he still belongs, Brock in 1924 finished fourth in the national indoor diving championships and only a wrenched back kept him off the United States Olympic team of that year.

Soon afterwards Brock more or

Eustace to Oppose Tillett in D. C. Debut at Arena

Joe Turner's wrestling emporium will take on the looks of a carnival sideshow tonight when the contortion industry's latest freak, The Angel, crawls through the ropes to make his Washington debut.

Alan Eustace, one of the wrestling gentlemen currently in residence in this sector, has been given the honor of being the first victim of The Angel, or Maurice Tillett, if you insist.

Maurice claims he's the strongest thing in shoe leather, but whether he is or not, his appearance has been enough to frighten off all doubters.

Furthermore, Maurice prides himself on the fact that he looks like a fugitive from Smithsonian Institution and that Harvard anthropologists confessed themselves to be nonplussed at finding him roaming the countryside in this modern age.

The particular pride of The Angel is his bear hug. Weighing 250 pounds, Maurice has most of his beef in his shoulde: : while his legs are inclined to be on the thin side. When everything is over and done, Eustace probably will be taking the count and The Angel stalking around challengin; the mob.

This little melodrama will be preceded by routines between Lou Plummer and Cliff Olson, Carl Pojello and Jim Comield, Tommy O'Toole and Jim Casey and Rudy Dusek and Don Evans.

Cards Win Again! Beat St. Vincent's

Rout Pennsylvnians, 44-39, in Close of Disastrous Cage Season

Held in check for 12 games this season, Catholic University's basketball attack exploded with unprecedented potency last night at the home gym as the Cardinals swept to a 44-39 victory over St. Vincent's.

In winning, C. U. obtained sweet balm for its previous meeting with St. Vincent's, which resulted in a 50-37 triumph for the La Trobe (Pa.) team.

More than 500 spectators filed into the Brookland gym to watch Catholic close its home season in a burst of glory after an early C. U. lead gave the Cards a 26-15 half-time lead.

Second Victory of Year

The Cards' early lead, gained through fine shooting by Joe Carrig and Johnny White, was too much for the visitors to overcome and as a result Catholic was able to acquire its second victory in 14 games, its other triumph having been gained at St. Peter's expense.

It appeared as if C. U. was destined to add another loss to its record after 20 seconds of play had elapsed as Bill Detzel drove down the court for a "snowbird" but the Cards destroyed this illusion by quickly running up a 22-7 lead before St. Vincent's could find the basket with any degree of accuracy.

Visibly tired after their torrid first half play, C. U.'s scoring slackened appreciably in the second half, but the Wildcats could never get within 10 points of the Cards, however, as Cathloic always seemed to summon its scoring strength when its lead was being threatened. Only in the final minuts of play, when the woeful lack of reserves was taking its toll on C. U. did the visitors show any semblance of taking a lead.

Major Stars

Never headed after the first minute, Catholic U. dominated play throughout as Carmen Pirro and his playmates outclassed the invaders on the floor and took advantage of some excellent shooting by White to bolster its lead.

Joe Major, of St. Vincent's, was the individual scoring leader with 15 points, while White and Pirro divided the winners' honors with 13.

In a preliminary game, St. John's High defeated the Catholic U. Frosh, 24 to 18, as Cady and Mulvihill, his former teammate, waged an individual duel for high scoring honors with the latter outscoring Cady, 9 to 7.

Post-A. A. U. Tourney To Start on March 4

District Basketball Titles to Be Decided At Heurich Gym

The District A. A. U. championship basketball tournament, sponsored annually by The Washington Post, will start on March 4, Joe Bertolini, new chairman of the basketball committee, announced last night. The games, which have climaxed court seasons hereabouts since 1926, will be conducted at the Heurich Gymnasium.

Due to various league schedules, inability to secure a suitable playing floor earlier and the promise of the largest number of unlimited teams ever to compete, the committee has found it necessary to curtail this year's tournament to some extent. Competition will be limited to three classes. In addition to the unlimited division, always featured, titles will be awarded in the men's 145-pound class and the girls' division.

As usual, Washington Post trophies, emblematic of the championships, will be presented to the winning team in each class. In addition, the District A. A. U. will award gold medals to individuals of the winning teams and silver medals to runners-up.

Rules governing play, eligibility and such will be on the entries blanks to be available on and after Friday night at The Post sports department and at the Boys Club of Washington, Third and C streets northwest.

Armor Bearer Wins in Hialeah's Graded Handicap Feature

Meade Rides $8.10 Horse In Triumph

Maryland Governor In Largest Week-Day Crowd; Calumet Pair Fail Favorite Backers

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 21.—Four of seven starters in the featured Grade "B" Handicap here today were named for the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup, but they did nothing to cover themselves with glory. As a matter of fact, the first two to finish are not eligible for the closing day classic. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Armor Bearer, under Don Meade, took the purse by three-quarters of a ength from Mrs. F. L. Flanders' Dunade. James Emery's Dolly Val was third, a length and a half behind. The victor, an 8.10 for $2 chance, finished the 7 furlongs in 1:24 1-5.

The largest week-day crowd of the meeting—15,112 by turnstile count—was on hand for the sport. Gov. and Mrs. Herbert O'Conor, of Maryland, were honored guests, with the headline event named after the chief executive of the Old Line State. Gov. Clifford Townsend of Indiana, Postmaster General James A. Farley and other well-known political figures were included in the big throng.

Entry Is Favorite

It was a bad day for favorite players, not one having made the grade, including the Armor Bearer race, which was sixth on the card. Armor Bearer recently finished a close second to Many Stings in a Grade "A" Handicap. The latter won the $10,000 McClennan Memorial.

Easy Mon and Talked About, the Calumet Farm Entry, ruled favorite at 95 cents on the dollar. The Widener eligibles in the field were Dolly Val, Technician and Inscoelda, of the Woolford Farm, and Easy Mon. Only Dolly Val showed promise. The mare closed a big gap to finish third.

Technician set the pace, slightly in front of Easy Mon and then Talked About, for 5 furlongs. Last years' Flamingo Stakes winner then stopped, along with his early challengers. Armor Bearer, fourth entering the stretch, ran over the leaders. He held the game finishing Dunade at bay and won going away.

Maiden 2-year-olds—14 of them—matched strides in the opening dash.

Big Pebble Scores

Belmar Arra, with long-legged Joe Rosen in the saddle, showed brilliant speed to annex first money in the 3-furlong initial event. The Howard Kane representative broke fourth from the outside position but dashed to the front and opened up a long lead before the others knew which way she had gone. At the wire, Belmar Arra held four lengths margin. She finished in 0:33 4-5 and returned $11.90 for two. Easy Blend, Cheetah and Daring Lady followed the winner home, heads apart. The last named was bothered at the break and made up a world of ground. The Diavolo filly was favorite in the big field.

The fifth race, a 7-furlong grade "C" handicap, was just another thorn in the side of the talent when Circle M Ranch's Big Pebble, a former E. R. Bradley colorbearer, drove to a half length success. The 8-to-1 shot came from last place in the small field and finished in 1:24 3-5. Como No was second by two lengths, with Calexico third. Big Pebble, a Widener Cup eligible, began to close ground around the bend and, in a hard drive through the stretch, finally wore down the pacemaking Como No.

Horsemen Ask Tropical for $1,000 Purses

Owners and Trainers Petition Track for Raise in Minimum

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park Racetrack, Fla., Feb. 21.—Horsemen today petitioned the Tropical Park management to raise daily purses to a minimum purse value of $1,000 for the forthcoming meeting, March 4 to April 10. According to the petition, names included those of Hirsch Jacobs, George Odom, Earl Sande, Morse Shapoff, George Phillips, John Gaver, James W. Healy, Ben Jones, D. McDermid, T. P. Morgan, R. O. Higdon, Frank Kearns, L. P. Harlan, J. M. Block, W. C. Winfrey, W. Hodson, A. G. Robertson, Kirby Ramsey, William Mulholland, A. J. Goldsborough, Mary Hirsch, L. G. Bedwell, Louis Feustel, George Alexandra and John Whitlow.

The petition reads:

"We, the undersigned horsemen, respectfully petition the officers of the Gables Racing Association for minimum purses of $1,000 at Tropical Park's spring meeting.

"We believe that the horsemen have contributed generously to the success of racing in Florida this winter. For this reason we feel that our request is not an unjust one.

"When racing associations find business not up to expectations, purses usually are the first items to be slashed, and in this matter the horsemen generally are ever-willing to be cooperative. Common justice would indicate the raising of purses when increased business warrants such action. We sincerely feel that the horsemen are entitled to share in the prosperity of any racetrack.

"Horsemen forever are under a tremendous burden of expense. Shipping to Florida and away from Florida is an expensive item. Feed for horses and living accommodations for men are other necessary requisites which come high in the maintenance of a Florida stable during the winter. It is not amiss to say that less than 5 per cent of the stables racing in Florida are able to cover expenses.

"For these reasons then we make a sincere plea to the executives of Tropical Park for a minimum purse of $1,000 at the forthcoming spring meeting."

BELMAR ARRA swerved to the inside the last three-sixteenths, but continued gamely under pressure and shook off her opposition. EASY BLEND, keen contender, was troubled by the winner, but closed gamely when clear. CHEETAH, in thick of contention, held on with good courage in the final drive. DARING LADY broke greenly and tardily, but closed a good gap through the stretch. The race was not truly run.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:43½. Off at once. Winner, Metcalf and Carr's ch. f. (3), by Mate—Belle Fair. Trained by R. Metcalf. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12⅘.

SASSY MATE drew out into a good lead rounding the turn and maintained her lead under steady urging. BINO, saving ground all the way, shook off ARCHED in the last furlong. ARCHED, hard ridden, faltered when the real test came. AMBUSCADE and BALTEE ran poor races.

Daily Double, BELMAR ARRA and SASSY MATE, Paid $143.30

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:13. Off 3:13. Winner, J. L. Wilde's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHOW UP, $63.00, $24.90, $11.90; UPHOLD, $9.40, $5.80; YOUR BUDDY, $5.40.

SHOW UP moved up with determination on the inside on the stretch turn, but then drifted out and forced UPHOLD wide and outgamed him in the final drive. UPHOLD made a bold effort when challenged, but could not stave off the winner's bid. YOUR BUDDY would probably have won, but for being forced wide through the stretch. SUN MICA lacked speed.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:43½. Off 3:44. Winner, Miss M. E. JEAN C. followed the pace until reaching the stretch, took command when ready and won in hand. DIXIE GIRL, reserved back of the pace, finished stoutly to outlast GUITAR. The latter finished strong. AGLOW stopped badly in the final furlong.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,300. For 3-year-olds and upward. Grade C. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:12. Off 4:12½. Winner, Circle M Ranch's b. c. BIG PEBBLE responded with determination when called upon and wore COMO NO down in the last strides. COMO NO set a steady pace and drew out entering the stretch, but then weakened. CALEXICO, hard ridden and securing clear passage on the inside, was unable to better his position. MARFEU lacked speed.

ARMOR BEARER came to the outside after being pocketed, and closed courageously to wear DUNADE down in the final strides. DUNADE, also taken to the outside, took a short lead in the last furlong, but was unable to withstand the winner's challenge. DOLLY VAL outrun early, gained steadily on the outside in the last quarter. TALKED ABOUT slipped through on the inside rounding the lower turn and assumed the lead, but weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Grade C. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:14. Off at once. Winner, River Divide Farm's b. g. CONFIADO, rated off the pace until into the stretch, drew clear at the furlong pole, but could not withstand the winner's challenge. SHOT PUT went into contention with a rush entering the stretch, but hung. ZEVSON, well ridden, had no excuses.

Attorney General Cannot Help Prevent Turf News

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 21 (AP).—Attorney General Hubert Meredith informed United States District Attorney William J. Campbell, of Chicago, today he could "not legally participate" in moves to prevent re-establishment of a national horse race news service.

Meredith wrote Campbell, in reply to a letter yesterday soliciting his cooperation along with that of attorneys general in 19 other States, that Kentucky law forbids its attorney general to "initiate a criminal prosecution." Meredith added:

"It would serve no useful purpose for me to express my private views concerning the matter."

Dear Al,

Just think, Confucius was born in 551 B. C. Imagine all the winners he could have picked if somebody had gotten the old boy to figuring the horses before we did a few weeks back. If you think he is weakening, you have another thought or two coming for he clicked with all his magic again yesterday. He says: Big Pebble to roll. Well, Big Pebble rolled right

Wheat Climbs To Near Peak For Two Years

But Profit-Taking At Close Shades 2⅜ Cents Advance

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 21.—Gains ranging up to 2⅝ cents, lifting wheat prices within about 5 cents of the highest levels in more than two years, were chalked up in another excited market session today before heavy profit taking caused a reaction.

Reports of improved flour business, Canadian export sales and European war news, including the Russian bombing of a Swedish frontier town, stimulated the advance but pit brokers said buying, which was hard to trace, was due largely to increased public participation.

When May wheat reached $1.06⅝ and July hit $1.05 shortly after midsession they were within fractions of the tops scored in yesterday's last minute rally. Closing prices were about a cent below the highs but 1⅝ higher than yesterday, with May at 1.05½@1.05⅝, July 1.03¾@1.03⅞. As was the case yesterday, heavy profit taking appeared just before the close in sufficient volume to whittle away much of the gain.

Other grains advanced with wheat at times, May and July oats contracts reaching new seasonal peaks. However, corn finished unchanged to ¼ up, May 57⅞@57¼, July 57⅝@57½, oats ⅜@⅞ higher, rye ⅝@1 cent higher and lard 5@7 lower.

Steel Activity Dips Slightly During Week

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 21.—Less precipitous declines in steel operating schedules hold out hope a leveling off may come within the next few weeks, Iron Age said today in a weekly survey.

"This week's decline," the magazine said, "is only one and a half points to 67 per cent, which is a few points above the rate of operations that prevailed in August last just before the outbreak of the European war.

"Meanwhile, new business is not showing gains. At best the aggregate volume of incoming tonnage represents 40 to 50 per cent of capacity, while in some instances it is not that good."

"The hopes of the steel industry for a reversal of the downward trend are based primarily on preparations for the outdoor activity of spring and on export trade," the review declared.

Foreign Orders Substantial

"Foreign orders have been in good volume and will, it is expected, be greatly stimulated if the war in Europe assumes a more active phase, but buying for spring activities, which usually manifests itself by this month, has not appeared in noticeable volume, having been delayed by unfavorable weather in some areas.

"A possible harbinger of spring is a better showing in fabricated structural steel. Awards of 21,700 tons and inquiries for 34,700 tons are above the average of recent weeks.

"The rush to turn out airplanes has brought further large buying of machine tools. Purchases of one type of equipment alone total about $500,000 and may reach $1,000,000."

The trend in scrap prices was still lower. The Iron Age composite price dropped 29 cents to $16.71 a ton, or about the level of September 12 last year, first week of the sharp rise following war abroad.

2 of 3 Public Governors Quit Big Board

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 21.—Gen. Robert E. Wood and Carle C. Conway plan to retire from the board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange at the expiration of their present terms on May 1, it was learned in reliable financial circles today. Both are representatives of the "public" on the exchange board.

Gen. Wood is chairman of Sears, Roebuck & Co., large Chicago mail order firm, and Conway is head of Continental Can Co., second largest in its field.

Curtis E. Calder, president of American and Foreign Power & Light Co., is the remaining "public" representative. His term also expires May 1. He has not yet informed the stock exchange of his attitude towards possible reappointment. The governors representing the "public" are appointed by the paid president of the exchange, William McC. Martin.

Calder was appointed to fill the vacancy left by the resignation more than a year ago of Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago. Hutchins resigned because the stock exchange governors refused to investigate to find out who knew of the peculations of Richard Whitney, former president of the exchange, before his firm's failure.

March Cotton Rises to 11.05 Cents Per Pound

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—The old March cotton delivery hit 11.05 cents a pound today, high for the recovery from the abrupt January slide, but couldn't break through. Final prices were 1 point higher to 2 lower.

Traders devoted most of the preholiday session to straightening out their commitments in March, the spot month, as the time for actual delivery of the staple drew near. After climbing to 11.05 that month slowly gave way as large spot interests peppered the ring with offerings.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler
A Special Correspondent.

Prices Close Irregularly Lower; Stocks Fail to Respond to Bull Factors; Bond Trading Dull; Finlands Firm

New York, Feb. 1.—Trading picked up on the big board today, but stocks held within the narrow range which has patterned the last few weeks. Neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night seems to stay the stock market from the regular course of irregularity. Such was the case today and the composite average registered this by turning in an insignificant decline of 0.07 point. It did so on a larger volume of trading, the big board's total amounting to 782,850 shares.

There are times in Wall Street when everyone is bullish and the market sinks, and there are times when everyone is bearish and the market rises. All of which goes to support the old contention that the public is always wrong. The present situation in the market appears to be different from either of the above two conditions. The majority in the street feels that the present downswing in business has about run its course, that foreign orders for war materials will make themselves felt in the near future, and that our stocks have not discounted the future possibilities, due perhaps to the fact that the market has been called upon to accept a considerable amount of foreign liquidation. All of which is bullish; yet the fact remains that the stock market holds to its trend of irregularly lower prices.

Some Good Buying

Here and there we see signs of determined buying in individual groups and in individual issues, but the market as a whole has been unable for weeks to shake off the influence of the year-end setback of business and the influence of foreign selling.

The market today had a few special features. Loft dropped 1¼ points and selling was believed based on an adverse decision against other companies dispensing a cola drink in their lawsuit with the Coca Cola Co. Inasmuch as Loft controls Pepsi-Cola, some of those in the street felt its position as a competitor of Coca Cola might be adversely affected.

Low-Priced Shares in Demand

Low-priced shares were again prominent in active categories. Studebaker was the day's leader, up ⅜ on sales of 29,500 shares and Pan-American Airways, Twin Coach and Consolidated Coppermines all were busy at advanced quotations. Coppers generally were firm in the face of profit-taking although news from the industry continued unusually favorable. It developed that domestic sales of the metal on Tuesday were the second largest for any trading day on record, second only to the memorable September 1 last year, when consumers and speculators took more than 90,000 tons as war hysteria swept markets. Incidentally, the copper and wheat situations are two of the reasons why some individuals in the street are more optimistic on the business outlook. Copper markets, it is frequently contended, forecast business tides well in advance. This was the case in the historic 1929 debacle as well as in the 1937 upturn. Current buying of copper, it is also believed, is based less on war demand expectations than on the brief duration of the business recession.

Recession Less Than Expected

With the added experience of recent weeks, analysts are pointing out that the let-down in many industries such as steel during the first quarter is actually much smaller than might have been expected following the unprecedented activity of the final three months of 1939. Typical of this thought are opinions given by paper and pulp executives attending conventions here. These emphasize that there is a leverage toward increased costs which maintains prices despite the temporary drop in demand and that once backlogs accumulated in the final quarter are worked off and customer inventories depleted by the larger consumption, buying in satisfactory volume should develop. This psychology is also evident in steel where specifications from construction and other seasonally active customer industries is appearing.

Increased activity of Bendix was noted today on the heels of reports that General Motors had disposed of approximately one-fifth of its 500,000-share interest in the company. General Motors, one of the few pivotals in the active list, was up half a point. Oils and steels were the most definitely lower groups. The former were no doubt affected by the overnight statistics from the American Petroleum Institute showing refinery and intransit gasoline inventories at record levels, above 94,000,000 barrels. Such stocks were considered a depressing influence in the price at this time a year ago when they were about 11,000,000 barrels smaller than at present.

Bonds Dull and Irregular

Only a few sections of the listed bond market displayed any activity today, partly because the preholiday atmosphere held trading to a minimum. Turnover was only $5,830,000, or considerably under the total for the preceding session. Some of the local traction issues again were active, but there was a tendency to take profits in others. Foreign dollar issues were better, despite the approach of spring and the fears that the war soon will widen. Domestic investment and speculative bonds were generally dull.

Finland 6s advanced a small fraction, owing to reports that another Russian division has been annihilated by the hard pressed troops of that small country. Norwegian and Danish bonds were in good demand, but Belgian and Italian issues were neglected. The German group reflected a little buying, while Canadian and Australian bonds were soft. Chilean and Colombian bonds were better in the Latin-American default section.

N. W. Tractions Up

Brooklyn - Manhattan Transit "free" 4½ were up another fraction, but most other bonds of the Brooklyn Transit System were marked downward on realizing sales. Interborough and Manhattan Elevated bonds were quiet and irregular. The long list of speculative rails showed only minor movements in either direction. Holding company and share privilege bonds were dull, while other speculative groups likewise held to former levels.

United States Government securities were mostly lower by small fractions, but the changes were too modest to be significant. Traders and institutional investors still are awaiting terms of the March financing and are not inclined to do much in the meantime. Highest grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds held to former levels.

Gen. Motors Sells 60,000 More Bendix

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—General Motors Corp. has sold 60,000 shares of the Bendix Aviation Corp., reducing its holdings to 400,000 shares, it was learned today. Four investment companies, including the Blue Ridge Corp., and the Chicago Corp., were said to be the buyers. The deal was said to have been made as an investment transaction rather than for distribution to the public in the open market. At current market prices, the stock would be worth about $2,000,000.

General Motors originally purchased 500,000 shares for $15,000,000, the stock of Delco Aviation and license agreements. Its remaining interest is nearly 20 per cent of the outstanding Bendix shares. Bendix, with headquarters at South Bend, Ind., maks automotive and aviation appliances.

Rich Future For Capital, Banker Says

John A. Reilly Sees Opportunities for Young Executives

Young business executives are standing at the frontier of the richest opportunity in the history of Metropolitan Washington, said John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank and third vice president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, in an address before the American Business Club of Washington, at its meeting last night on "The Business Executive and Banker—Eye to Eye."

"International and national developments have forced this responsibility upon us. Washington, as a great world center, is no longer an idle dream but a reality. If we do not take advantage of present opportunities we can blame no one but ourselves."

Major Developments

Mr. Reilly reviewed some of the major developments in our country during the past decade. "These trying years have taken a tremendous toll on those who guided the destiny of business during them. Many young men have been called to high office early in their business and professional lives to fill the places of those who gave their all to save their enterprises and to preserve America as a great democracy. With this calling there comes a definite responsibility," he said.

"We cannot, of course, constantly live in the past, but we can profit by past mistakes. While business has undergone a radical adjustment, the old fundamental principles must be adhered to. In your daily duties I would suggest that you also adjust your procedures to meet modern requirements.

"By all means consider carefully the advice of older men. When a young man reaches the stage where he feels he knows it all, and needs no counsel, his usefulness to his firm, his community and his family ceases.

"Let age and youth enter into a real partnership, one with wisdom born of experience and the other with the stamina and enthusiasm necessary to overcome the obstacles of the day and we are bound to have a greater America."

C. & O. Directors, Except Chairman, Are Renominated

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Feb. 21.—Directors of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway yesterday unanimously nominated all directors except Chairman Herbert Fitzpatrick for re-election at the road's annual meeting April 23, and voted to add three members to the board.

This action was announced by President George D. Brooke; who explained Mr. Fitzpatrick previously had announced his intention to retire from active service April 15.

Nominated for the additional board places were three New Yorkers—Harvey D. Gibson, president of the Manufacturers Trust Co.; Harry C. Thompson, vice president of the Continental Bank & Trust Co., and James G. Blaine, president of the Marine Midland Bank Co.

The announcement that the action was unanimous evidently marked a compromise between part of the directors and Director Robert R. Young, chairman of Alleghany Corporation, the holding corporation having nominal control of Chesapeake & Ohio.

"It is believed the election of this board will assure the continuation of the present management," Mr. Brooke said.

U. S. Rubber Seeks To Buy $8,000,000 Gillette Tire Co.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—United States Rubber Co. today offered minority stockholders of the $8,000,000 Gillette Rubber Co. $29 a share for their stock on or before February 29.

This, it was said, was about $3 a share more than the offer under the plan of liquidation of Gillette on which its stockholders will vote at a special meeting February 29. The plan provided that U. S. Rubber, which already owns over 81 per cent of the Gillette Rubber stock outstanding, will pay net book value plus $1 a share for good will, or approximately $26 a share.

Today's offer was made in a letter to Gillette stockholders from H. E. Humphreys, jr., U. S. Rubber vice president. Gillette Rubber's plant is at Eau Claire, Wis.

The Gillette Co., which has a daily capacity of around 11,000 automobile tires, 15,000 to 18,000 auto tubes and 7,000 to 8,000 bicycle tires, will be continued in production, it was said.

U. S. Rubber recently acquired Fisk Rubber Corporation properties, stating that it needed additional production capacity and preferred to absorb already existing production facilities rather than build new, and increase surplus capacity in the industry.

Power Production Drops for 5th Week

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Electric power production dropped for the fifth week in a row during the period ended February 17, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. The latest total of 2,475,574,000 kilowatthours represented a drop of 1.9 per cent above 2,248,787,000 kilowatthours in the comparable 1939 week.

The decline in emergency output forced the Associated Press power index to a new low for the year at 125.7. The index, which is based on 1929-30 as 100 and is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 125.9 in the preceding week and 116.4 a year ago.

made up of Patricia Smith on Bell Hop, William McConnell, jr., on Temptation, Herbert Gay on Dark Magic, and Worrell Roffe on Clipped Wings, placed second with a total of three faults. All four horses are Government-owned and performed well over the course of six fences. Third place went to the Landon School for Boys, with nine faults, and Arlington Hall's first team took fourth with 10½ faults.

The much-discussed Take Your Choice jumping class, in which entries chose their own path over seven of the nine fences in the ring, was a complete surprise as horse after horse failed to get through the difficult double in-and-out. Lieut. O. K. Kane's Ard Patrick, the ultimate winner, was the only survivor, as Lieut. David Wagstaff's Enterprise and Lieut. Richard E. Nelson on the Government's Highball, tied for second.

In the jump-off, Highball plunged headlong into the second fence in what looked like a bad spill, but Lieut. Nelson scrambled up unhurt and placed third to Enterprise, who went around the whole course without a fault.

Henie Brock Has Varied Career

less discontinued his diving career, feeling the need of making his mark in the business world. First he turned to his first love, figure skating, and joined a troupe in Canada.

But in 1925 he finally succumbed to the urging of his father and accepted a position with a St. Paul telephone company in which his father was an executive. Restless as ever Brock soon was longing for diversion and he found it the following year as bond salesman for an investment firm in St. Paul. The year 1926 saw Brock branching out in still another line. He became half owner of a clothing store near the University of Minnesota campus and plied his new trade with handsome profits.

The novelty of peddling clothes to college students wore off, however, and once again our changeable hero changed occupations. This time, using the savings of his last business enterprise, he bought a boys' camp near Alexandria, Minnesota, which he still owns.

While occupied with the development of his camp which has grown until now it employs a staff of 14 instructors, Brock accepted an offer to become an original member of the Ice Follies from Oscar Johnson and Eddie Shipstad with whom he had skated in earlier years from coast to coast. And he has been convulsing audiences ever since with his ribald humor.

Brock married in 1937 a Chicago girl, nee Mary Kile, whom he met one Christmas eve, and they are one of the most envied married couples of the Ice Follies. Heinie, like most professional actors, has an unusual hobby. It is filming of colored movies. Each spring after the Ice Follies has run its course, Brock travels for about six weeks lining up prospects for his boys' camp in the summer, all the time grinding his camera.

And as Evelyn Chandler, lovely leading lady of the Ice Follies, says, "You can go into Heinie's room day or night and see a feature for nothing. I don't believe the man ever sleeps."

How Early Wynn Entered Baseball

Jonings in his first big league start, but the Nats put it down to his weariness. He had been the busiest pitcher in the Piedmont League.

He's a chunky young dark-complexioned lad who weighs all of 185 pounds. That's where he gets his fast ball. He hasn't the sign of a change of pace or much of a curve, but Bucky Harris is willing to overlook those deficiencies if he can improve his control. His fast ball is a sneaky affair, meaning that it's faster than it looks. This winter, young Mr. Wynn took a new bride. He's one-eighth Indian, on his grandfather's side which accounts for his copper complexion. His daddy's an auto mechanic in Hartford, Ala.

Galento, Baer Bout Listed for Jersey

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Mike Jacobs finally found a home today for the fight between Tony Galento and Max Baer. It will be staged over the 15-round route late in May at the Jersey City, N. J., ball park, with Finnish relief cutting in on the receipts.

Jacobs originally had hoped to stage the fight in New York, but Galento refused to appear here when the New York State Boxing Commission refused to grant a license to his manager, Joe Jacobs.

Gallaudet Bows To Bridgewater

An overflow crowd in Gallaudet gymnasium last night saw the Blues go down to a 46-to-38 defeat against Bridgewater's sharpshooters in the final half after a nip and tuck first-half battle.

Boxing Association Orders 4 Champs To Defend Titles

By the Associated Press

The National Boxing Association threatened yesterday to withdraw recognition of four boxers as world champions unless they sign to fight certain foes designated by specified dates.

Middleweight Champion Al Hostak, of Seattle, must sign by March 15 to box either Ceferino Garcia, or the winner of the scheduled Garcia-Ken Overlin contest, or the winner of the Garcia-Henry Armstrong match.

Featherweight Champion Joey Archibald, of Providence, R. I., must sign before March 28 to meet Petey Scalzo, the winner of this bout to agree at the same time to meet Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore.

Lightweight Champion Lew Ambers has been ordered to sign before March 22 to defend his title against Davey Day, and Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong by May 29 must sign to fight Milt Aron.

S. E. Boys Club Tankmen Beat Charlotte Hall

Southeast Branch of the Washington Boys Club turned in a 39-to-27 victory over Charlotte Hall M. A. yesterday in a dual swimming meet at the Southeast tank.

Victories in five of the eight events, along with the first two places in the 50-yard freestyle and five third places, turned the tide in Southeast's favor. Hass churned to an easy triumph in the first race in 28 and three-fifths seconds ahead of Benson, also of Southeast.

The relays were evenly divided between the two teams. Hallmen took the 150-yard medley and Southeast won the 200-yard. The winners time in the final event was 1:52.

Summaries:

50-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Hass (S.E.); second, Benson (S.E.); third, Argent (Char.). Time, 28 3-5 seconds.

year as a winning pitcher was Dutch Leonard.

The only other Washington pitcher of certified ability is Ken Chase, and that virtually comprises the picture of the Washington pitching staff—Leonard and Chase.

That is the biggest gamble the Nats are taking this year—with their pitching. Aside from Leonard and Chase their pitching prospects are founded on little more than fond hopes—hopes that Joe Haynes will continue to develop and that Joe Krakauskas will finally find some sort of a groove for his fast ball.

There isn't a rookie pitcher in camp who threatens to be an asset to the Nats next season with the exception of Haynes. Krakauskas, of course, no longer is tagged as a rookie. The others are of extremely doubtful talent. Among the lot there may be a passel who will develop as big leaguers but the odds against that eventuality next season are terrific.

The fellow with the best record in the higher minor leagues is young Bucky Jacobs, erstwhile no-hit pitcher for the University of Richmond. At one point with Springfield in the Eastern League last season, Jacobs won 13 straight games. But he was found wanting in a trial last spring and Harris shakes his head sadly at the realization that the lad's fast ball is not fast. If a young pitcher can get by on a curve alone, Jacobs may prove a surprising package.

At best, Almon Williams and Paul Gehrman, Southern Association graduates, do not figure to be any balls of fire with the Nats. Harris sincerely hopes that Williams is a better pitcher than he was when he failed with the Athletics two seasons ago. The big fellow's fast ball is apparently fast enough. Gehrman has displayed mere flashes of talent and has a propensity for taking on weight that is of no assistance to his delivery.

The most possible surprise among the rookie pitchers may well be the ageless Venezuelan, Alexander Carrasquel. There were occasions last season when the South American showed signs of positive brilliance. He had speed, a curve and control. But he was prone to follow a clever game with an unspeakably awful one and Harris came to regard him with some disgust toward the finish of the season.

Little Hoyas Lose In Baltimore, 26-24

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 21.—Baltimore high school basketball triumphed over the Nation's Capital here tonight as Loyola High defeated the Georgetown Prep quintet, 26-25, in the final minutes of play.

The Little Hoyas took an early lead and were two points to the good at half-time, 14-12. The Baltimoreans came from a 17-17 tie as the last quarter began and forged to the forefront after a see-saw battle. Center (Sport) Barrett, of the Little Hoyas, was high scorer with 10 points.

Episcopal Routs Landon by 28-13

With Gamble leading the attack, Episcopal High's five romped to a 28-13 victory over Landon in the latter's gym yesterday. Gamble accounted for 14 points. Bradley and Lee were the only other scorers for the winner. Paul Baker turned in 10 of Landon's points.

Howard Five Bows, 59-57, To Va. State

Virginia State College basketeers scored a 59-to-57 victory over Howard University last night at the Bisons' gym before a capacity crowd. The lead of the game changed many times before Mitchell Powell dropped in the 2-point clincher with only a minute left to go. It was a C. I. A. A. game.

The game was closely contested throughout with first the home team and then the visitors taking the lead. Center Parker and Forward Giles set the scoring pace for the hosts with 17 and 15 points, respectively.

Tonight the teams meet again in Orange, N. J.

18 Colts, 2 Fillies Seek $50,000 Derby

4, Gallahadion; 5, Fairy Chant; 6, Tough Hombre; 7, Chatted; 8, Exemplify; 9, Valdina Star; 10, Royal Crusader; 11, Son Altesse; 12, Sweepida; 13, Augury; 14, Sir Jeffrey; 15, Sun Pharos; 16, Blue Suit; 17, Maestro Sascha; 18, Last Gold; 19, Certainly; 20, Weigh Anchor.

Fairy Chant, half sister of the 1937 Derby winner, Fairy Hill, and with the same Jockey Peters up, rated marked interest because of her easy victory in the slop February 3 in the Santa Margarita Handicap. The distance was a mile and one-sixteenth, longer than any other Derby eligible has traveled to win.

The other filly, Augury, with Lloyd Knapp signed to ride, is another splendid mudder, and it would not be a surprise for the McCarthy entry, or her companion, Fairy Chant, to make the Derby two in a row for the feminine sex. The King Ranch's Ciencia won the race in 1939, with the top purse amounting to $42,375.

Racing Secretary Webb Everett stuck by his prediction that the starting field would number 16. Doubtful starters include Exemplify, Certainty and, if the track is muddy, Tough Hombre.

J. C. C. Five Wins Over Regal, 65,47

John Frank scored 22 points and otherwise set a hot pace last night as the Jewish Community Center's Big Five defeated Regal Clothiers in a Heurich Amateur Basketball League game at Heurich gymnasium, 65 to 47. Genderson seconded this performance with a 19 point exhibition.

Clint Quantrille, contributed 18 points to his team's cause as Delaware & Hudson turned back Q. & S. Laundry in the other end of the doubleheader, 58-27.

Employers Listen Now, Reserve Official Asserts

Employers throughout the country are today recognizing the problems of their employes more than anytime in the last ten years, said Ernest G. Draper, member of the Federal Reserve Board, speaking yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the Federal Community Chest Forum at Child's Restaurant.

Where employers once considered pleas for better working conditions as "sob stuff," they are now listening to their workers and actually are taking an interest in reducing unemployment, Draper said. He credited the change to intensive activities by labor groups.

Draper said employers must devise methods of regularizing employment in their respective businesses so that seasonal lay-offs will not be necessary.

Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle

Listen!

with Slocum

This morning we consider Arthur Godfrey's audience. Not those odd million listeners the WJSV salesmen prattle about, but the poor gentlemen who have to climb out of bed every morning at the crack of dawn, face to face with the thought that very soon they will be face to face with the redoubtable redhead.

The gentlemen in question are Bob Pilcher and Don Saunders, crack members of the crack C. B. S. engineering staff in Washington. Radio engineers are the gentlemen who are responsible for the quality of a broadcast and they work behind boards covered with knobs, meters and dials and if they don't know their intricate business a perfectly good radio receiver is helpless.

Pilcher works with Godfrey on his WJSV shows, and Saunders is the man at the controls on Arthur's extensive network originations. When the former gob is doing his network stint he works facing Saunders, a fact which pains Saunders just as much as it does Godfrey. When he works with Pilcher, Bob's back is to Arthur and only when it is necessary to remind Arthur of station breaks does he gaze into the Godfrey kisser.

Arthur is nothing if not a complete and thorough workman. He records every show he makes for the network and listens to it immediately after the broadcast. When he is unhappy about a sour note he gazes reflectively at Saunders and says in mock seriousness, "Well, you messed up another, Donald, my boy." Saunders invariably points out that it is surprising there are so few mistakes because he feels no man can do his best work looking at Godfrey in the morning.

Saunders, through his instruments, can raise or lower Godfrey's voice. Arthur, a former engineer himself, knows this well, so he often lowers his voice until it is almost a whisper. Saunders dutifully opens gains and increases power and when Arthur is sure of this he loves to suddenly raise his voice. Unless Saunders is ready for this horseplay the resultant sound is pretty horrible, and while quite technical, quite embarrassing to the engineer.

I Take This Man

BY ANNE TEDLOCK BROOKS

"I'll try to make you happy, darling," Alan said. "I'll find out all that I can about how to get married in an hour's notice"

Alan and Brenda see a great deal of each other in the following days, and Cary shows some pique about it. Alan takes Brenda for a drive in the country and finally tells her that he loves her but is fearful of asking her to marry him and go back to Brazil. He tells her he wants her, even if she does have an infatuation for Cary. They stop at an old inn for dinner. Brenda consents to marry Alan and when news of the blizzard comes over the radio, she suggests that their wedding take place that night, for Alan is scheduled to return almost immediately to Brazil. They gravely discuss the whole situation.

Chapter 7

THE ROOM was empty now and Alan kissed Brenda's lips. "I'll try to make you happy, darling," he said. "Let's find the ladies' lounge and you rest a while. I'll find out all that I can about how to get married in an hour's notice."

Wedding Preparations

It was incredibly easy. They merely drove down the little main street to the white picket fences around a small Cape Cod cottage and there they found the minister. He helped them get their license and within two hours they were ready.

The minister's wife was accustomed to this and had thoughtfully placed her flowering house plants in an effective way about the room. Alan had found the only florist shop in the little town and had bought most of its cut flowers.

Brenda made some small purchases from the only department store in town. She had at the last moment put galoshes in the car and was able to tramp around in the snow without too much discomfort.

At the last moment she had caught herself up breathlessly. "You're going to be married, Brenda Holliway, within the hour, and you're going about it as calmly as if you had been long experienced at it." She caught a glimpse of herself in a mirror. Her face was pale and her eyes almost black. "Smile," she told herself.

Then, they had driven back to the cottage and stumbled through the drifts to the sidewalk, which kept filling up with snow. The wind was swirling a gale now, and the icy blast sent them shivering into the warm room.

"You're cold, dear," the minister's wife said, taking Brenda's wraps.

She was white-haired and sweet-faced and Brenda found herself liking her at once. "I couldn't bear to be married at an office of a justice of the peace," she thought. "That seems too much like a cold business transaction. But this—they actually seem to care about us personally."

They sat in front of the fireplace for a few moments.

Then a tap on the front door and the older woman crossed the room. "That will be Theodore and his wife, coming to be your witnesses. Our son and daughter-in-law," she said, opening the door.

Brenda heard their greeting in the vestibule and they came in, a tall man and a small woman. Alan rose and the introductions were made. Brenda found herself wondering what they did in this small place. They chatted pleasantly a few moments, and found that the son was a college professor at home for the week-end.

Ceremony Performed

Alan was pale as they took their positions before the fireplace. Brenda felt the touch of his hand for a brief second. "I am glad," she told herself, "for this pleasant, happy home to be married in, and for these fine people who are taking part in our marriage."

"I, Brenda take thee, Alan, to be my wedded husband . . ."

Till death—till—death!! Brenda's face grew whiter, her words almost inaudible. She began to tremble. Then Alan took her hand.

The words went on. The minister's clear voice rang bell-like through the living room.

Then it was over. Man and wife. Brenda's lips were almost white. She felt Alan's hand tremble, too. Then he kissed her gently, his eyes compelling hers. She smiled.

The congratulations were over and the minister's wife said, "Please stay and have a little supper with us."

But Alan answered, "I'm sorry, but we must make arrangements to go on."

The son spoke then: "I'm afraid you won't be able to get out of town. The highways are already drifted. The warnings have been coming in over the radio all evening."

"We'll stay at the inn, then," said Alan.

Brenda felt grateful to him. It sounded as if he knew just what they must do. They took their leave and the hospitable door closed behind them.

The snow was deep. The car made its way slowly, following the ruts of other cars and after a long time they came to the inn where they had eaten their supper.

Brenda said, a queer catch in her voice. "It looks odd going in without luggage."

Their Wedding Night

"We should be grateful for the stores, though," Alan said. He was remembering the ugly green of the pajamas he had purchased. When dozens of them in fine broadcloths, silk crepe and printed satins lay in his bachelor room at home.

And Brenda thought of the bright rose color of the only satin gown she could buy. My wedding night! And like any girl, she had dreamed of the lovely silken trousseau she would purchase for the occasion.

Together they laughed suddenly. "My nightie!" Brenda said.

"And those horrid pajamas!" Alan admitted his thoughts.

Alan signed the register, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Tremaine, and gave his home address in the city. The proprietor took them up the old walnut stairs. Brenda found her hands were icy.

Alan, following silently beside her, said: "We'll take two rooms, darling. Don't look so frightened."

But after the innkeeper had left them and Brenda looked about in Alan's room with its huge double bed and its flowered chintz drapes at the wide windows, she turned to him and said, "Alan, I want this to be a real marriage, you know."

He pulled her to him gently. "I want this to be whatever you want. But tonight, darling, you sleep in there." He picked her up and carried her into her room. Brenda felt his heart beating unevenly. Her heart was pounding, too, she realized. Alan seated her on her bed. He knelt and gently stripping off her shoes and hose, he massaged her white, slender feet. Brenda felt relaxation slipping over her. She caught Alan's bright head close to her breast. "Alan, Alan," she whispered.

The Next Morning

Brenda found that she had slept, even though she had been sure that she would not. She awakened rested and refreshed.

The sunlight crept through the part of the windows that was not banked with snow. It was a pretty room, she discovered in the morning light. White ruffled curtains and a white dressing-table flounce, soft, deep chairs and a wide four-poster bed. She smiled at the big pitcher and basin on the washstand. It had been fifteen years since she had seen one!

The door between hers and Alan's room was closed. She remembered his closing it firmly last night. He had come back into her room after she was in bed, to kiss her goodnight and she still felt his kiss upon her lips. He had been wearing the insufferable green pajamas and they had both laughed at their color.

She wondered if he had slept well.

She stretched out an arm and quickly pulled the covers up over her shoulders. The room was icy cold. She sprang out of bed and closed the window she had left open a tiny crack. The fireplace was laid with kindlings and a small log. She found the matches and struck one. The red blaze greedily licked out its tongue to catch the kindlings.

"Brenda! Get back in bed! You'll catch your death! I'm coming in to build your fire!"

"Too late, Alan," she called back to him gayly, as she dashed back for the warmth of the covers. "Come in, though, if you want a freeze."

A blanket pulled around his shoulders Alan entered. He knelt in front of the fire a moment. "I could use a little of the Brazilian sun at its brightest just now." He came over and stood by her bed.

"How did you sleep?" He looked as though he had slept but little, she thought instantly. But his hair was brushed and he had managed somehow to shave in the water that must have been icy in his pitcher.

"Grand. And you?"

"A little. I've been up for a while. My room is warm," he said. "You must dress in there. This is like it must be down on the farm!"

Their One-Day Honeymoon

"Alan, could we stay here tonight, too? I'll wire the office. There's no reason why I can't stay over another day even if the roads are clear back into the city.

"You mean you'd actually like it? It's roughing it, I'm afraid. Of course I'm used to much less than this out in the mining camps. This would be luxury there."

She put her hand on his arm. "I'd like to stay. It reminds me of my childhood home. It's lovely and quiet, Alan."

He lifted her hand to his lips. Then he was bending over, and picking her up, he held her in his arms. "Brenda Brenda I love you so. My darling, I could not sleep for thinking of you. Tell me that you love me a little."

"I could not help loving you, Alan," she said simply.

The day was one that Brenda never forgot. Together, they went down to a hot breakfast served before the fireplace. The waitress was small and pretty and gave them satisfactory attention.

"The storm stopped during the night," she observed pleasantly. "The roads will be cleared with the snowplows by noon."

Brenda smiled at her. "I think we'll stay over another night and drive back to the city tomorrow morning."

"Maybe you'd like to watch the coasting, then, this afternoon out on the long hill back of the church. Everyone turns out for it. Some of the older boys have made huge bobsleds, and the snow is just right today."

"Shall we go to church, Brenda?" Alan asked after they had finished their breakfast.

"Yes, let's do, Alan. I haven't been to church for ages. I think I would like to go today." Her dark eyes searched his blue ones. "Then, if our galoshes hold out, shall we walk to the hill this afternoon?"

They went to church to hear their minister's sermon. He smiled at them and shook hands with them heartily. The strangers, the pretty girl and her tall handsome husband, caused a great deal of comment among the congregation.

The News Gets Out

In the early afternoon Alan and Brenda started out to hike to the coasting hill. As soon as they came down to the lobby of the inn they noticed two young men who were evidently waiting for them.

"Mr. Tremaine, we're from the Times. Won't you please give us some pictures?"

Brenda gasped. She had not once thought of the newspapers. Of course, Alan Tremaine's wedding would be news.

"We are anxious to get some of both of you. Miss Holliway's pretty important, too, you know."

Alan looked his dismay. "I'd never thought of this, Brenda. I'm sorry." He took her arm. "We're in for it, of course! I wonder how they found out so soon!"

They were agreeable to the reporters telling as little of their plans as they could manage. Brenda said as they went out the door, "You must wire your people, Alan. They shouldn't have to read it in the newspapers! Imagine how Pixie and your mother would feel!"

Alan nodded grimly. "Yes, mother and Prixie would feel hurt. Dad will think I've lost my senses, knowing as much about my life in South America as he does. Let's go to the telegraph office first."

Blood Bank Parties Still Being Given

U. D. C. to Present Part of Funds Tea Will Raise Saturday

Although St. Valentine's Day, "theme day" of the drive for funds for the blood and serum bank of Children's Hospital, is history as far as 1940 is concerned, benefit parties still are being arranged.

Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr., president of the D. C. Division of United Daughters of the Confederacy, yesterday announced a tea to be given at 3 p. m. Saturday, with part of the proceeds to go to the fund. Known as the Colonial Silver Tea, the party will be given in Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont avenue northwest, by the Maj. Charles M. Stedman Chapter.

In addition, two bridge benefits will be given under auspices of the division at the Memorial Hall, March 2, said Mrs. Vann, one at 2 p. m. and the other at 8 p. m. Tickets may be purchased from division officers, chapter presidents or Miss Laura Sansbury, 1801 I street northwest.

Seat Pleasant chapter of the Eastern Star yesterday announced a movie benefit at the Capitol Theater in Seat Pleasant, March 4. The picture will be "Our Neighbors."

Vincent B. Costello auxiliary unit, No. 15, American Legion, will give a party at 8 p. m. next Thursday at the home of Mrs. Margaret M. Greensburg, 217 Seaton place northeast.

Yesterday's receipts in the campaign sponsored by The Post, Station WJSV and the American Contract Bridge League totaled $249.20, which included $95.20 raised by Stephen P. McGroarty Post, American Legion, at its party last Monday; $86 raised at the American Bridge Association party Tuesday; $42 in proceeds from the Federal Bridge League party a week ago; a $15 donation by Quentin Roosevelt Post, No. 11, American Legion, and a $5 gift from the Ladies' Guild of St. John's Church.

Group Seeks More Funds For Schools

Board of Trade Committee Supports Efforts of Educators

The education committee of the Washington Board of Trade yesterday voted to back the Board of Education in part in its efforts to restore some of the $6,000,000 cut from its 1941 estimates by the Commissioners and the Budget Bureau.

Holding a luncheon meeting at Harvey's restaurant, the committee decided to recommend that the Board of Trade ask Congress to make provision for the education of physically handicapped children.

After considerable discussion, the committee adopted a report recommending an appropriation of $43,400 for the activity, which is to be dropped at the end of this fiscal year by the WPA.

The committee approved a report urging an appropriation of $600,000 to start construction of a new Wilson's Teachers College, as well as $30,000 for plans, and recommending that the Abbott Vocational School be built in Brentwood Park rather than at Thirteenth and Upshur streets.

Funds for a new elementary school in American University Park, additional appropriations for heat and light, school gardens, and repairs also were recommended.

The committee will ask the Board of Trade to fight for "not less than $100,000" to be used by the new recreational council for improvement and extension of playgrounds and other facilities.

The request of the Board of Education for 24 new teachers to be assigned to the Coolidge High School, which will open in September, and for 20 additional junior high school teachers to relieve over-crowding also was approved by the committee.

After much discussion the committee voted to request assistant principals for the Wilson and Anacostia High Schools and the Deal and Paul junior high schools. The Board of Education had asked for 15 such jobs, but the estimate was not transmitted to Congress.

In a report demanding that all nonresident pupils in Washington public schools be charged tuition or barred, the committee approved the Tydings bill to extend free schooling provided "it carries an appropriation of $500,000 from the United States Treasury."

The Tydings bill would permit the free entry of pupils who live with guardians or any other District resident who assumes the role of a parent.

Mother Fights For Son She Made Confess

A grief-stricken Washington mother said yesterday she intends to fight to have the 18-year-old son she persuaded to surrender to Baltimore police as a suspect in a $1,500 bank robbery.

The boy, Mack Lloyd Wilt, was held last night with three other Baltimore youths in the Southern District Police Station at Baltimore, awaiting a hearing at 9 a. m. today before Magistrate Edward Dougherty, police said.

He was there because his mother, who operates a rooming house in the First block of N street northwest, had persuaded him to give himself up was the best thing to do.

Mrs. Wilt said, "I did what any other mother should do."

Her son, with William De Bullet, 19, of Baltimore, came to Washington after the holdup Monday night of the Westport branch of the Union Trust Co. Police said Mrs. Wilt persuaded the two youths to return, and added that she drove over to Baltimore with them. The boys, police said, returned $1,450.

Mrs. Wilt said that her son had "got into bad company" in Baltimore. "There is just one thing that will help now, to get a good lawyer and fight for him." She said she had the lawyer.

Wilt, according to the Associated Press, was charged with assault and robbery of Gerald E. Mergenthaler and William Anthon, bank employes, at pistol point, and larceny of a 22-caliber pistol and an automobile, both said to have been used in the holdup.

De Bullet was charged as an accessory before and after the fact. Lester E. DeWitt, 19, was charged as an accessory after the fact. Dean S. Gentry, 21, was charged with receiving stolen goods — $10 — from Wilt.

Abernethy Hits 'Lip Service To Religion'

Congressmen, Social Leaders Could Aid Church More, He Says

Washington's legislative, social and business leaders who "give only lip-service to religion" were scored here yesterday by Dr. William S. Abernethy, Calvary Baptist pastor and president of the Washington Ministerial Union. He addressed the Washington Federation of Churches' weekly union Lenten rites.

"A great thing could happen to Washington," he said at Epiphany Church, "if one of our Congressmen who believes boys are this Nation's hope would stand up and announce his intention to do his part in developing religious life by taking a Sunday school class, and be there every Sunday."

Dr. Abernethy cited case of a legislator who told a Bible class that the world needed to strengthen its spiritual foundations, and hadn't been in a church himself for ten years.

The clergyman also criticized "social leaders of this city using religion as a cloak of respectability instead of trying to make their religion really mean something." He said they were willing to send a check to the church occasionally, but never wanted to "get out and really support the church."

The pastor, who was presented by Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, presiding, based his message on the Biblical story of Christmas, a great civic leader of Corinth, whose conversion to Christianity brought his family and subsequently many others of the city to Christ.

Dr. William L. Darby, executive secretary of the Federation of Churches, was in the congregation.

Dr. Alfred E. Barrows, pastor of Eastern Presbterian Church, addressed yesterday's noonday Lenten rites of Southeast churches at the Penn Theater. Today's speaker will be the Rev. Edward G. Latch, pastor of Chevy Chase Methodist Church.

Letts Orders Man Relieved Of Year Term

Sentenced on Charge On Nonsupport By Judge Bentley

After a habeas corpus hearing in the District Court yesterday, Justice F. Dickinson Letts ordered the release of Walter B. Wilson, colored, who January 9 was sentenced by Judge Fay L. Bentley of the Juvenile Court, to serve a year in jail for nonsupport of his wife.

Wilson was convicted of failing to obey a court order to pay $20 a month to Mrs. Mary Wilson. He has been confined in the District Jail and in Occoquan Workhouse.

Attorneys Edward W. Howard, Theodore A. Brown and Richard R. Atkinson filed the habeas corpus petition in which Wilson contended that he was wrongfully convicted. His petition admitted that he was married to Mary Wilson in 1927, but denied that he was obliged to support her as his wife because a woman he married in 1917 was still alive and the 1917 marriage never was dissolved.

Justice Letts held that Wilson was convicted of failing to support only his wife and that no children were involved. The jurisdiction of the Juvenile Court was limited by the act of June 1, 1938, to cases involving children, Letts said, in ruling Wilson's conviction was unlawful.

Turkey is "thoroughly committed to democratic ideals and is preparing the Turkish people to take their place alongside the Western democracies," Dr. Wesley M. Gewehr, professor of history at American University, said yesterday in a broadcast over WJSV. He spoke on "Turkey—Key to the East."

His talk was one of a series on "The University in the Home," sponsored by the radio station. Present in the studio during the broadcast were representatives of parent-teacher associations of Stanton and Randle Highlands Schools, who are cooperating in producing the series.

We've never chopped down cherry trees, as George Washington did, BUT we do know how to chop down prices. And we're doing it today. This is our annual time to clean house and get rid of our Buyers' errors. In every department throughout the store there's an accumulation of odd lots . . . broken size ranges . . . odds and ends. To tell you the truth some of them are even soiled and messed from handling. In many instances our Buyers went overboard in their enthusiasm for certain patterns and styles. They make mistakes . . . and their mistakes of yesterday are our reductions of today at hacked-down and chopped-off prices that should bring you running. But take heed! Store hours from 9:30 to 1 p. m. . . . so our employees can have a holiday, too.

When EPIDEMICS rage.. keep within this "Circle of Protection"!
THE new epidemic is now upon us, but there's no need to become panicky. People usually escape illness if they fortify themselves with the "Circle of Protection," that is, take the following precautions:
1. Get at least eight hours' sleep every night. 2. Open windows wide before retiring so as to get plenty of fresh air. But avoid drafts. 3. Refrain from overeating, especially sweets. Keep the bowels open. 4. Exercise at least fifteen minutes in the open every day. 5. Wash hands frequently so as to keep them free from germs as far as possible. 6. Avoid overheating in home or office.
IMPORTANT
Never breathe through the mouth. Only the nose can warm up cold air before it strikes the tender membranes. Only the nose can filter out irritating dust and other impurities which break down resistance to disease.
If your nostrils are clogged-up due to a cold or nasal catarrh, insert Mentholatum in them night and morning. Mentholatum will soothe the irritated membranes and help relieve the local congestion in the nostrils, thus enabling you to breathe more freely through the nose instead of the mouth.
N. B. If any member of your family has sore throat, fever (over 99 degrees), chills, headache, extreme weakness, and aching of back and limbs, put him to bed and call your physician at once.
